

ArchiveWell: Supporting and Encouraging Cataloging of Archival Collections

JANET CEJA AND IAN LI

Abstract: Our research explores the relationships between people and archived documents by way of a social cataloging website. ArchiveWell.org was developed to allow users and custodians of archival resources to identify documents found in archival repositories by way of social web applications such as rating, reviews, and tagging. The website is presently in its beta version.

About the authors:

Janet Ceja is a PhD student in Library and Information Science at the School of Information Sciences at the University of Pittsburgh.

Ian Li is a PhD student at the Human-Computer Interaction Institute at Carnegie Mellon University.