All distances were recorded as driving - walking distances will often be shorter

Many New Orleans restaurants will not do separate checks or split bills. BE SURE TO ASK HOW IT'S HANDLED AS YOU ARE SEATED. If everyone is ordering the same price amount, it is often easiest to ask the server to split the bill across whatever # of credit cards. Some servers will let you write down the amount to be charged on each card. Some restaurants will not issue more than 4 or 6 tickets per table. Being prepared with cash sometimes makes this process easier.

Some restaurants and many bars are cash only. Bank of America ATMs can be hard to find, but virtually every Walgreens has a Chase ATM. There are a couple of Capital One ATMs in the CBD/French Quarter.

Vegetarian notations were current as of July 2013, based on the menus available at the time on each website. Restaurant menus often change frequently in NOLA, since so many places use fresh ingredients. For those with strict food allergies or restrictions, we strongly recommend that you call ahead to find out whether the restaurant can accommodate your needs. Meat often finds its way into some dishes as a flavoring that may seem otherwise vegetarian (for example, cooked greens or red beans and rice), so be sure to speak with a server about selecting the best dish if this is a concern.

During August, many fine dining restaurants participate in COOLinary New Orleans. During this promotion, you can select a prix fixe menu for a very reasonable price. Check out <http://www.coolinaryneworleans.com/>
