Take Me Out to the Ball Game

President Lyndon Baines Johnson and Senator Margaret Chase Smith at the D.C. Stadium season opener in 1967. The Washington Senators played the New York Yankees, with the Bronx Bombers crushing the Senators 8 to zip. While discussing world events with Smith, LBJ consumed two hot dogs, popcorn, an ice cream sandwich, and peanuts! Elected to the Senate in 1948, Smith was the first woman to serve in both houses of Congress. Margaret Chase Smith Library, Northwood University, Skowhegan, Maine.

Strategies

Task Force on Intellectual Property Strategies

Developments in copyright law and intellectual property issues in general have long been of keen interest to archivists. From the outset issues of copyright and fair use have been a bit of a sticky wicket. With the development of the Internet and the World Wide Web these issues are now even stickier. These are difficult times at best, especially for archivists who, on an almost daily basis, must grapple with the vagaries of copyright law and fair use.

The rapid growth of the Internet and the Clinton administration’s focus on encouraging its development has resulted in a complicated and fast-paced set of issues which could have profound impact on the ability of archives to provide full access to their holdings, especially in electronic form. In response to these threats to fair use, last winter Council formed a Task Force on Intellectual Property Strategies.

Chaired by Karen Benedict, the task force will operate under the following charge: “to review and evaluate the proposed legislation to revise the Copyright Act of 1976, including H.R. 989 and S. 483, The Copyright Term Extension Act; and H.R. 2441 and S. 1284, The National Information Infrastructure Copyright Protection Act. The task force is charged with preparing position papers with suggested modifications to the proposed legislation for the Society to disseminate to members of Congress, the media, and SAA membership on the position of SAA and the archival profession regarding the proposed legislation.

“The task force will also consider the significant issues being raised in the NII Copyright Protection Act which affect archives and archivists in the electronic transmission of unpublished materials. The task force will prepare position papers with suggested modifications to the proposed legislation, for the consideration of Council, for dissemination to Congress, the media, and allied professional organizations. The task force will conduct its work over a six-month period, and will issue the position papers by September 30, 1996.”

Copyright and Fair Use

Last July the Clinton Administration’s Working Group on Intellectual Property Rights, chaired by Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks Bruce Lehman, issued a draft report, Intellectual Property and the National Information Infrastructure, more commonly known as the “Green Paper.” This report began an intense policy debate on proposed changes to the U.S. copyright law, especially in the areas of fair use, distribution by transmission, and educational use. Other related and equally heated debates concern security issues, encryption, and online service provider liability.

What further underlies and complicates these debates is the complex nature of the Internet, the rapidity of technological change, and the large number of stakeholders involved. The issue of fair use, for example, pits large corporate communication giants, such as Viacom and Disney, against the scholarly community, which also includes academic publishers who lie somewhere between these two poles.

Great fear exists. It may well be the driving factor behind the rush toward legislation. Corporations fear losing control of their intellectual property in an arena where unlimited publication can occur at the push of a computer key. Scholars fear that corporations, never comfortable with the concept of fair use, will seize this opportunity to rescind it altogether, and replace it with a “pay per view” for each screen of information called up from the Internet. Rushing to create legislation in this atmosphere does not serve public interest well, especially when debate is so thoroughly polarized and the issues are so nuanced and complex.

In September the Working Group on Intellectual Property Rights issued its final report, now known as the “White Paper.” It was on the basis of this final report that Congress introduced H.R. 2441 and S. 1284, the National Information Infrastructure Copyright Protection Act. While those on the Hill insist that these bills mean to do nothing more than enact “minor clarification” of copyright law, many, including the American Library Association, the American Council of Learned Societies, and the American Historical Association, vigorously claim otherwise.

It’s a Tie for Vice President: Maher and Van Camp in Special Election

by Teresa Brinati, Managing Editor

The 1996 election for vice president of the Society of American Archivists resulted in an unprecedented tie between the two candidates—William Maher of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and Anne Van Camp of Stanford University—who received equal numbers of votes from the 1,001 ballots cast in this election. Of these 1,001 ballots, 988 contained votes for the office of vice president. Never before in the sixty-year history of the Society has a tie occurred. The bylaws stipulate that in the event of a tie, a run-off election is required to determine a winner.

“Our intention to offer a strong slate succeeded, but in an unexpected way—a tie in the balloting for vice president,” explained Fynnette Eaton, chair of the 1996 Nominating Committee. “Clearly it is a recognition of the high calibre of both candidates.”

A ballot for the special election was mailed to all individual members of SAA in late April. Members will vote again for one vice president, who will serve in that capacity for one year and then will become SAA’s 53rd president in 1997-1998. The ballot contains the candidates’ responses to the question posed by the Nominating Committee, along with their respective vitae. The following question was formulated by the Nominating Committee for vice presidential candidates:

The recent election resulted in an historical first for the Society of American Archivists—a tie between the candidates for vice president/president elect, William Maher and Anne Van Camp. A special election is being held to determine a winner.

In an economic and political environment in which the viability and stability of existing state and local archival programs are being threatened, what steps can SAA take to ensure the continued existence of these archival programs?

“We regret any problems that the tie has caused,” Eaton said, “but we are very appreciative of the sacrifice both candidates are willing to make to serve this Society.”

If you have not received the special election ballot by May 20, contact the SAA office immediately and a new one will be sent to you (ask for Jeanette Spears at 312/922-0140). Ballots must be completed and returned to the SAA Office postmarked no later than June 14, 1996. Election results will be posted in the July issue of Archival Outlook.

4 Archival Outlook — May 1996
With the Cuadra STAR search engine and the unique STAR/Web interface, you can offer fully interactive retrieval of your databases — on the World Wide Web or your in-house network (your “Intranet”). Using standard browsers, your users can do real database searches, using PCs, Macs, or other workstations.

More than a collection of Web pages.

STAR/Web gives you great system flexibility. You can use built-in tools to modify template pages for menus, assisted searches, index displays, reports, order forms, and hypertext links — to fit your databases and users.

More than just input forms.

You can give your users much more than “menu, menu, click, click” and much more than keyword searching in a single input box. With STAR/Web, you can offer users a variety of assisted search input forms designed just right for your database content and users.

Expert and novice searchers alike will become satisfied users when they can easily explore what’s in your databases and find what they’re looking for!

More than just a “back” key.

STAR/Web remembers what users enter and select, so they can automatically “paste” selected terms from an index display into a search textbox and execute an already fully formed search expression with only one click. And, STAR/Web remembers the check boxes that users select, even across multiple pages of a report, to place orders or request services.

Plus archives management.

STAR with STAR/Web will give your users the best possible access to your document and non-print archives. And with STAR/Archives plus other ready-to-use information management applications — for records and library management — you’ll have the right software to move into the 21st century.

Don’t settle for less. There’s just one choice.
Browne, Gilliland-Swateland and Hirtle Join Council

In March the membership of the Society of American Archivists elected Valerie Gerrard Browne, Anne Gilliland-Swateland, and Peter Hirtle to Council. They will begin three-year terms this September following the conclusion of the 1996 SAA annual meeting and will serve through the 1999 conference. They will replace outgoing Council members Karen Benedict, Timothy Ericson, and H. Thomas Hickerson.

All candidates for Council were required to respond to the following question posed by the Nominating Committee: “Now in its 60th year, today SAA focuses on strengthening its position within the broader society. Many members encourage SAA to do more to increase the Society’s visibility and influence on matters of professional concern. How will you balance the expending of resources for these activities with the basic needs and services expected by the membership?” Candidates’ responses/statements were printed in the ballot. Excerpts from Browne, Gilliland-Swateland, and Hirtle’s responses, along with brief biographical sketches, follow.

Valerie Gerrard Browne

In April, Browne became the first full-time director of the new Women and Leadership Archives at Loyola University Chicago. Browne has worked for Loyola for almost fifteen years and for the past year and half she has been splitting her time between the university archives and developing the Women and Leadership Archives.

In her candidate statement, Browne noted that “we have several alternatives for increasing SAA’s visibility and influence on matters of professional concern without raising dues or sacrificing basic needs and services: (1) change our priorities, based on member input; (2) use our present resources more creatively and innovatively; and (3) seek additional funding sources.”

Browne has been a member of SAA since 1973. She has served on the Nominating Committee (1985-86), Audit Committee (1981-88), Committee on the Status of Women (1978-84), co-chaired the Host Committee (1985-86), chaired the Awards Committee (1989-91), and has been an active member of the College and University Archives Section and Women’s Caucus.

In addition, Browne is a past president of the Midwest Archives Conference (1991-93) and a founding member of the Chicago Area Archivists.

Anne Gilliland-Swateland

Gilliland-Swateland joined the Department of Library & Information Science at the University of California at Los Angeles as an assistant professor in 1995. Prior to that she was the director of SourceLINK, Historical Center for the Health Sciences, and adjunct lecturer at the School of Information and Library Studies of the University of Michigan.

In her candidate statement, Gilliland-Swateland said that, “today, more than ever, innovative approaches are required to address educational, technological, legal, financial, and policy issues arising out of the nascent information age and developing global service economy. . . . SAA’s greatest resource is the expertise of its members, which covers a range of information management paradigms and organizational experiences . . . [SAA] should also aggressively build and leverage dynamic new relationships in prominent fields outside the profession such as science, technology, and medicine, where archival expertise in such areas as record-keeping technology, and ethical and policy issues can be demonstrated to be valuable commodities.”

Gilliland-Swateland has been a member of SAA since 1987. She has chaired the Description Section (1995-96) and currently serves on the Committee on Archival Information Exchange Working Group on Encoded Archival Description and the American Archivist Editorial Board. She has also served on the Task Force on Professional Coalitions (1994-95) and the International Affairs Committee (1990-93).

In addition, Gilliland-Swateland is a former Council member of the Midwest Archives Conference, twice a Bentley Research Fellow (1990, 1995), and has authored, edited or co-edited three books, two journal issues, and more than 25 articles.

Peter Hirtle

Hirtle is an archives specialist for Policy and Information Resources Management Services at the National Archives and Records Administration. Prior to joining NARA in 1993, Hirtle was the curator of modern manuscripts for the National Library of Medicine.

In his candidate statement, Hirtle explained that SAA “can increase its involvement in professional matters continued on page 34
Dooley, Garlick, and Pearce-Moses to Serve on Nominating Committee

The SAA elections also yielded three members to serve on the 1997 Nominating Committee: Jackie Dooley, Karen Garlick, and Richard Pearce-Moses. The Nominating Committee is responsible for identifying and selecting next year’s slate of candidates, as well as drafting the questions posed to candidates. Two members of Council, to be appointed by the president, also serve on the committee.

Candidates for the 1997 Nominating Committee responded to the following question posed by this year’s committee: “The direction of leadership for the profession and the Society’s position on important professional issues will be determined by the election of the officers and Council members. How will you, as a member of the Nominating Committee, select and encourage individuals to participate in the governance of SAA?” Excerpts from Dooley, Garlick, and Pearce-Moses’ candidate statements follow.

Jackie Dooley

Dooley is the head of special collections and university archives at the University of California-Irvine. She has been a member of SAA since 1987.

In her statement, Dooley noted that she would look for “archivists who have a reputation for being knowledgeable, collaborative, hard working, and fair; who have the skill and presence to serve as effective public figures on the Society’s behalf; who hold clear opinions which they are able to defend objectively and stand behind, even when unpopular, and who believe in the power of mentoring to recruit new archivists, encourage their professional growth, and help build confidence in their leadership abilities.”

Karen Garlick

Garlick is the deputy assistant director for collections management services/manager of preservation services at the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution. She has been a member of SAA since 1987.

In her statement, Garlick stated that “the future leaders of SAA are already important members of the Society [and] have demonstrated their commitment to SAA and its future . . . by giving their time and energy to further the goals articulated by past and present SAA leaders in partnership with other SAA members . . . I would consider it my task to select a slate of candidates who are dedicated to the Society as an organization, responsive to the needs and interests of the membership, and representative of the diversity of the individual membership.”

Richard Pearce-Moses

Pearce-Moses is the documentary collections archivist/automation coordinator at the Heard Museum in Phoenix, Arizona. He has been a member of SAA since 1988.

In his statement, Pearce-Moses responded, “SAA’s leadership must: help the profession identify best practice . . . promote continuing education at all levels . . . show creativity and innovation in stimulating the participation of membership at the grass-roots level . . . improve ongoing communication between individual members . . . [and] foster cooperation with other professions and organizations with a vested interest in archives . . . I will seek individuals who can keep the Society growing.”

Jackie Dooley, Karen Garlick, and Richard Pearce-Moses were recently elected to the SAA Nominating Committee. They will serve a one-year term beginning this September.
Mission Possible: Re-evaluating the “How, What, When, and Why” of SAA’s Journal

Prompted by the challenge facing SAA to consistently publish the American Archivist on a quarterly basis, Council appointed a Task Force on the Future of the American Archivist at its meeting in February (see Archival Outlook, March 1996, p. 6). The task force is charged with examining the effectiveness of the journal in serving the information needs of SAA members and the broader archival community. Task force members include: Nancy Boothe, Teresa Brinati, Philip Eppard, Susan Fox, James O’Toole, Charles Schultz, and Helen Tibbo, chair. The task force is currently assessing the situation and will report to Council at both its June and August meetings.

Your input is needed as well and here are two opportunities for you to contribute your valuable insights to this investigation.

First, in order to assess how to maximize the effectiveness of the American Archivist and to implement a “real-time” publishing schedule, we need you to fill out the brief survey on pp. 9-10. So, please take a few minutes to complete the readership survey and return it no later than June 5, 1996. Replies will be confidential and anonymous. Please send this survey form to:

Helen R. Tibbo, Associate Professor
School of Information and Library Science
100 Manning Hall, CB# 3360
University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3360

You may also respond by using the electronic version of the survey at the SAA Web site: http://volvo.gslis.utexas.edu/~us-saa/. Please note that electronic communications are not anonymous.

Secondly, the Task Force invites you to attend a special open forum at SAA’s 60th annual meeting in San Diego, California. The forum will be held August 29 at 7:45 a.m. at the Sheraton Hotel and Marina. The forum will be your opportunity to access survey feedback and participate in a discussion with other members and the task force. The results will be published in the November issue of Archival Outlook.

Thank you in advance for your assistance in making the journal effective in fulfilling the informational needs of members like yourself.
American Archivist Readership Survey

Please help SAA assess the American Archivist by returning this survey no later than June 5, 1996.

There's an easier way to preserve for more than a lifetime...

Call for a free Paige Archival Storage Box today and preserve your own history.

The Paige Company Archival Storage Boxes have been designed by archivists to meet the demanding requirements of lifetimes of storage. These extremely strong, multi-walled boxes are the equivalent of 400 lbs PSI (pounds per inch). Each carton is manufactured from 100 percent "acid-free" and "lignin-free" blue gray corrugated paper with a pH of 8.0 to 10.0. Our boxes have a 3% calcium carbonate buffer, contain mold inhibitors and have no residual sulphur. All Paige archival boxes conform to specifications from the National Archives for archival document storage.

Remember, only the Paige Company sells Paige archival and storage boxes.

Archival Internet Sites

These listings will allow you to surf to almost any site on the Internet concerning archives, special collections, and history.

Ready, 'Net, Go! Internet resources for archives
http://www.tulane.edu/~lmiller/ReadyNetGo.html
This is your “one stop shopping” center for archival Internet resources. From this one site, you can hyperlink to every archival and special collections resource on the Internet. Included also are links to resources for history and other academic fields.

National Archives and Records Administration
NARA’s new Web site premiered in January of 1996 and is a model of how to provide archival resources via the Internet. Clear, clean, attractive, and easy to use, the NARA Web site contains a wealth of information about NARA’s holdings in Washington, D.C., and federal repositories across the nation. It provides information on NARA’s mission, access policies, hours of operation, and other information helpful for researchers. It also has online exhibits, and visitors can browse the bookstore and even buy souvenirs from the gift shop.

Society of American Archivists
http://volvo.gslis.utexas.edu/us-saa/
Includes SAA education and workshop information, the publications catalog, the SAA directory of archival organizations, membership information, annual meeting information, and many other very useful resources. This site was created and is maintained for SAA by the University of Texas at Austin SAA Student Chapter. An important and useful SAA membership resource.

Archivist’s Daybook
http://www.tulane.edu/~lmiller/Daybook.html
Here you will find contact information for meetings, workshops, seminars, and other events from around the world of interest to archivists. It is derived from the “Archivist’s Daybook,” a regular feature of the Southwestern Archivist (http://www.tulane.edu/~lmiller/SWA.html), the quarterly publication of the Society of Southwest Archivists (http://www.tulane.edu/~lmiller/SSA.html). Send information on upcoming events to Lee Miller at: lmiller@mailhost.tcs.tulane.edu.

http://www.directnet.com/history
Lists sites offering historical information and sites chosen for their relevance to historical research. This is probably the best index for finding history resources, history department home pages, and history teaching materials on the Internet; includes hyperlinks to archival home pages. An excellent resource.

Archival and Special Collections Listservs
http://volvo.gslis.utexas.edu/~epcsaa/list.html
Lists listservs related to archives, rare books, records management, and special collections. Also includes instructions for using listservs. Part of the Society of American Archivists student chapter Web site at the University of Texas at Austin (http://volvo.gslis.utexas.edu/~epcsaa/). gopher://una.hh.lib.umich.edu:70/00/inetdirsstacks/archives%3Akaynthony
This was one of the first lists of archives with gophers and WWW sites on the Internet. It has not been updated since 1994 and is included here mainly for historical interest. Includes Internet addresses and summaries of what information was available online at that time.

The Unofficial Internet Book List

The Historical Text Archive
http://www.msstate.edu/Archives/History/index.html
The oldest File Transfer Protocol site for historians, the archive contains a variety of resources. These include ASCII text files of historical documents and scholarly papers (primarily for the Americas), GIF/JPEG files, software, library search programs, diaries, and bibliographies. Also includes extensive hyperlinks to other history sources on the Internet, including archives and history departments. This is an excellent history resource. The Historical Text Archive is supported by the College of Arts and Sciences and the Computing Center of Mississippi State University and is maintained by Don Mabry (mail to: djm1@ra.msstate.edu), associate dean and professor of history, MSU.

Library and Archives Exhibits on the World Wide Web

SAA's 1996 annual meeting is fast approaching and we'd like to invite you to leap into the fray! Plan now to attend this 60th anniversary conference at the Sheraton Hotel and Marina, in San Diego, California, August 25-September 1, 1996.

Conference Highlights

Among the meeting highlights, are nearly 90 educational sessions, thirteen preconference workshops, the International Archives and Information Technology Expo, a variety of tantalizing tours and special events, including an opening banquet and awards ceremony, as well as a farewell reception.

The Program Committee has put together an exciting selection of sessions exploring the relationship of the archival field to an increasingly diverse nation and the challenges presented in documenting such diversity in U.S. history and culture. There will be sessions devoted to the continued development of technology and its impact on the archival profession as well as sessions examining the more traditional topics of education and professional development, description, and preservation.

Noted anthropologist and Spelman College President Johnnetta Cole will set the stage for the meeting with a keynote address on diversity in the workplace in the 21st century at the opening plenary session on Thursday, August 29, from 9 a.m.-10 a.m. Later that day, special guests, U.S. Archivist John Carlin and Archivist of Mexico Patricia Galeana, will share their visions for the future of their institutions in a thought-provoking session entitled, “Vision, Mission, and Values: Perspectives of the National Archivists of Mexico and the United States.”

Discover what's new in archival products and services at the International Archives and Information Technology Expo on August 29-30. More than 30 exhibitors will display their wares, demonstrate their products, and discuss their services. In addition, visit the “Our Other Lives Exhibition” which will feature arts and crafts created by your colleagues.

The annual meeting also presents a unique opportunity for committees, sections, and roundtables to conduct business meetings, exchange information, and promote discussion and communication on specific archival topics. More than 50 such groups represent the myriad interests of SAA, its members, and the archival profession at large. Consult your program for scheduled meetings.

San Diego is a city rich in history and diversity, well suited to SAA's 60th annual meeting. Nestled in southern California on a natural harbor along the shores of the Pacific, San Diego boasts mountains to the south and east, bountiful beaches, and wonderful weather. SAA has organized many special events and tours highlighting the beauty of this magnificent city. Sign up for a leisurely oceanside jaunt, visit a California mission or the famous San Diego Wild Animal Park, and top it off with a tasting at a local winery. Dine and dance under the stars as you cruise the bay in a luxury yacht. Cross over the bridge and step into the charming community of Coronado, home of the Glorietta Bay Inn, the palatial Hotel Del Coronado, and the North Island Naval Station.

The 1996 annual meeting of the Society of American Archivists promises to be a celebration of the growth and evolution of the archival profession. For six decades, members have gathered annually with enthusiasm to learn, to share experiences and expertise, and to recognize achievement and initiative in the archival profession. Don't miss this opportunity to become a part of SAA's 60th birthday bash!
The Program is in the Mail

The Annual Meeting Program is in the mail. No kidding! Hot off the presses and into your hands—the program is being printed and mailed to you this month. New! Managing Change and Organizational Transformation Workshop

Many of us have thought long and hard about how to do our jobs better. Our motivation comes from a number of factors including significant reductions in resources (both personnel and funds), increased demand for our materials, and efforts to cope with electronic records issues. We invest enormous amounts of time and energy talking and thinking about ways to change. We alter a procedure, implement a new process, create a new product, or even restructure the organization based on plans full of sweeping changes. Unfortunately, all too often these changes do not produce the results we intended and, at times, just the opposite occurs.

In restructuring an organization the most dramatic, disruptive, and expensive changes can result in a whole set of unanticipated consequences including overlapping roles and responsibilities, confused communication channels, and less productive, resistant, or maybe even hostile employees. Often the restructuring does not create the organization we really need to meet the challenges.

Many organizations, including archives and manuscript repositories, must transform themselves in profound ways. Although we know that change is necessary, most of us have no framework for it. We think that if we have a good idea, all we have to do is implement it. We even imagine those profound changes and create plans, but fail to prepare our organizations to accept and implement them.

“Managing Change and Organizational Transformation” will be held August 26-27, 1996, in San Diego. This workshop will introduce participants to a set of ideas and tools that create a framework for change. The focus will be twofold: (1) the social processes or relationships between people that need to be in place to effect change, and (2) the management processes that lie at the heart of any sustainable organizational transformation.

Social processes include such topics as new ways of thinking, learning, communicating, relating, and creating accountabilities. Management processes include decision, policy, and resource allocation processes; product and project management; and process redesign. The course will be highly participatory, employing a combination of presentations, dialogue, and individual and group exercises. People at all levels of an organization will benefit from being exposed to the universal skills, techniques, and methods presented.

The instructors are:

- Lisa Weber, who served as program officer for automation at SAA and has continued her active involvement in SAA through several committee assignments. She is currently in Policy and Information Resources Management Services (PIRM), National Archives and Records Administration.
- L. Reynolds Cahoon, who was formerly managing director, Family History Department, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for 16 years. He has extensive strategic planning, systems development, and operating management experience and a deep interest in sustainable organizational transformation. He was recently appointed assistant archivist for PIRM at the National Archives.

American Archivist Survey
Your input is needed. The Task Force on the Future of the American Archivist has put together a readership survey in an effort to assess how to maximize the effectiveness of the journal and implement a “real-time” publishing schedule. The survey is on pp. 9-10 in this newsletter. Please complete the survey and return it no later than June 5, 1996. Replies will be confidential and anonymous.

Trivial Pursuits
How well do you know your professional association? The Society of American Archivists is celebrating its 60th birthday this year and on the back cover of this issue of Archival Outlook you will find a special contest celebrating SAA. We’ve asked six questions spanning six decades of Society people, places, and things. Answer all of them correctly and you could be the lucky winner of a $60 gift certificate good toward your next SAA publications purchase! See back cover for contest.

Listen up!
Audio cassettes of 42 selected sessions are available from the 59th annual meeting of the Society of American Archivists held August 28-Sept. 3, 1995, in Washington, D.C. SAA Vice President Nicholas C. Burckel, director of libraries and adjunct professor of history at Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was recently appointed by President Clinton to the National Historical Publications and Records Commission.

Judy Weinland Farrar, formerly the archivist at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, is now archivist at the University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth.

Ellen C. Garrison, formerly regional archivist for the New York State Documentary Heritage Program serving the Capital District and Southeastern regional library councils, has been appointed curator of the William Stanley Hoole Library at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

Wofford College of Spartanburg, South Carolina, is conferring an honorary doctoral degree on a distinguished alumnus who is also one of its administrators: Herbert Hucks, Jr. Hucks, from the class of 1934, is being recognized as he nears the 50th anniversary of his appointment as a Wofford College administrator. He will receive an honorary doctorate of literature during the college’s 142nd commencement exercises on May 19.

William J. Jackson has joined the staff of Circus World Museum, Baraboo, Wisconsin, as archivist, and will manage the archival collections at the museum’s Parkinson Library and Research Center. Jackson received a master’s degree in library and information science from the University of Wisconsin in Milwaukee last December.

Kris Kiesling joined RLG Member Services in April for a six-month appointment as a visiting associate. Kiesling will be on leave from her position at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin, where she has been head of the Department of Manuscripts and Archives since 1990.

Eva Steiner Moseley was recently named a Silver Award winner by the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science as part of its 25th anniversary celebration. The award honors 25 individuals with noteworthy and sustained contributions to libraries and information services at the national, state, and local levels. Moseley was cited by her nominator for “developing the most significant U.S. manuscript collection on the history of women in America, at Radcliffe’s Schlesinger Library where she is curator of manuscripts.”

Jerry C. Oldshue has recently retired from the positions of university archivist and acting director of the William Stanley Hoole Special Collections Library at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

Charles Schultz, professor at Texas A&M University’s Sterling C. Evans Library and William P. Clements Archivist, has been named the first recipient of the Irene B. Hoadley Professorship in Academic Librarianship, a two-year appointment supporting research and publication as part of librarianship. Schultz will use the $7,000 annual stipend provided by the professorship to complete and publish a manuscript describing life on board ships during the 1849 gold rush.

Barbara Trippel Simmons, former librarian at the Worcester County Horticultural Society, is now the processing archivist in the Smith College Archives, Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts.

Thomas Wilsted has been named director of the Thomas J. Dodd Research Center at the University of Connecticut. Wilsted was formerly associate director for operations of the American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming at Laramie since 1990.

Debates and Discourses:
Selected Australian Writings on Archival Theory, 1951-1990
EDITED BY PETER BISKUP ET AL.
The formative period of the Australian archival profession was during 1951-90. The sixteen essays and papers which have been reproduced in this publication were written during that period by Australian archivists who were grappling with some of the basic problems of archival management. Archivists and archives students will find some major Australian contributions to archival theory, as well as ideas, arguments and debates that continue to be relevant as archives face the challenges of the electronic world.

Designing Archival Programs to Advance Knowledge in the Health Fields
EDITED BY NANCY MCCALL AND LISA MIX
Because of the vast quantity of records being generated in the contemporary health fields and the limited resources available for archival preservation, archival programs must resort to new strategies for appraisal and selection. This book brings together a broad range of specialists—including archivists, historians, science policy experts, a clinician, a medical librarian and computation expert, and a specialist in museum curatorship—to explore way of balancing conflicting demands through reform in collection development, collection management, and user services.

Electronic Records Management in the New Millennium:
Managing Documents for Business and Government (video training package)
WRITTEN BY RICHARD BARRY AND ANNE THURSTON
Ever increasing quantities of information exist only in electronic or digital format, yet little thought has been given to the means of insuring that this information is retrievable and readable over time. This video training package provides a powerful way forward. In two films with accompanying teaching notes, world authorities on the subject explain the issues involved and their implications for managers and professionals. The package can be used as a stand-alone training tool or as part of in-house training programs, professional society meetings, continuing education schemes and graduate academic courses. Papers from a conference on managing electronic information also included.

The Guide to Research Collections of Former United States Senators, 1789-1995
COMPiled by KAREN DAWLEY PAUL
This guide identifies primary source materials documenting the lives and legislative activities of 1,658 individuals of the 1,726 members who completed service in the United States Senate prior to January 3, 1995. The collections are housed in approximately 594 publicly-accessible repositories across the nation. The work has two objectives: to encourage scholars, teachers, and students to use these collections in creative and innovative ways; and to inspire current members of the Senate to follow the tradition of their predecessors by carefully planning for the preservation and disposition of their own materials.

Volunteerism and What It Means

In a recent issue of VIEWS: The Newsletter of the Visual Materials Section (April 1996), editor Laurie A. Baty of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission appealed to members to become actively involved in the section. Her suggestions for participation apply to the broader membership as well. Here are her ideas.

All organizations big and small are dependent on volunteers. SAA needs volunteers, too. The office and its wonderful staff provide incredibly valuable services to us as members, yet they’re simply the tip of the iceberg. SAA depends on individuals with an interest in the profession to do something for their profession, whether it’s as an elected member of Council or a volunteer staffing the information booth at the annual meeting.

Please consider some ways in which you can aid the section [as well as SAA] and its work:

- Attend the [SAA annual meeting — see pp. 14-15 for details] and the annual section meeting
- Stop by to chat with section leadership during the section’s office hours at the annual meeting
- Go on a section-sponsored tour at the annual meeting
- Put together a proposal for an annual meeting
- Give a paper or chair a session at an annual meeting
- Send your ideas and comments about the section [committee, roundtable, association] to the chair or chair-elect
- Write an article for the newsletter
- Volunteer to do a book review
- [Run for elected office]
- Vote for section [association] leadership
- Join SAA and a section (if you are reading a pirated copy of this newsletter!)

Congressional Sources on the Internet

The “Illuminations” column on pp. 12-13 of this newsletter discusses Internet sites concerning archives, special collections, and history. Here’s one to add to the list on Congressional Sources, by Rebecca Johnson Melvin, and reprinted from Manuscript Repositories Section Newsletter (February 1996).

One of the most common complaints about the Internet is the unfathomable disorganization of the enormous amount of information now available in the electronic environment. In an effort to meet the challenge of co-locating and improving access to Internet sources for information about Congress, especially congressional collections in archives, Rebecca Johnson Melvin of the University of Delaware Library has established a Web site called, “Congressional Sources on the Internet”:

http://www.lib.udel.edu/ud/spec/congress.html

The site, hosted by the University of Delaware Library’s Web server, includes the following menu items: Archival Repositories, U.S. Senate, U.S. House of Representatives, THOMAS, Roll Call Online. Congress-L, and the Congressional Papers Roundtable. In addition to the official Web pages for the Senate and the House, THOMAS is the Library of Congress’ page for access to legislative information, and Roll Call Online is the electronic version of the newspaper of the Hill. Congress-L provides information for subscribing to the topical region discussion list maintained at the University of Oklahoma. The Congressional Papers Roundtable provides information about that group, including steering committee members with e-mail access, bylaws, and newsletters.

CGAP Midwinter Meeting

submitted by Pamela Witte-Mendivil

The Committee on Goals and Priorities (CGAP) met in February in Washington, D.C., to evaluate its role relative to the goals of the Task Force on Organizational Effectiveness. The entire committee was present: Waverly Lowell, Chair; Thomas Battle, Roland Baumann, Bruce Bruemmer, Susan Davis, Lynda DeLoach; Tim Ericson; Susan Fox; Alden Monroe; Lisa Weber; and Intern, Pamela Witte-Mendivil.

The following topics were discussed: advocacy and external policy, communication, education, reporting forms, governance, membership services, outreach with other organizations, publishing and publications, the SAA structure as it relates to membership units and the restructuring process, professional standards, strategic planning, and SAA’s vision and focus.

The committee identified a need for an improved communication structure, and the need to support the initiatives fundamental to SAA’s mission.

The Society is international in scope and provides continuing education, professional standards, member services, networking, annual meetings, advocacy, partnerships with other organizations, and serves as the premier provider of professional publications worldwide. Ironically, a challenge faced by the Society is limited public awareness regarding SAA and archives in general. The need for proactive advocacy is essential, yet response to a workshop on this subject or one on public relations has been reserved. Goal #1 in the strategic plan calls for exerting “active leadership on significant archival issues by shaping policies and standards, building effective coalitions, and improving public awareness of the value of archives.” The membership must strive to continue to educate the public as to the existence of the Society, its mission and its goals.

Improved communication within SAA and its sections, roundtables and committees is needed. It is common for groups within SAA to meet only once a year, yet leadership changes annually. Greater continuity from chair to chair should be established, as well as increased dialogue between members. Active involvement in the Society and its endeavors by all of its members is critical to the success of the strategic plan.

The National Archives: A Spirit of Change

When I began my efforts last summer to lead a Strategic Directions Initiative at the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), I knew that we could not make real change without help. To effect the management and cultural changes needed to take NARA into the 21st century will require not only the efforts of NARA staff but also the cooperation of federal, state, local, and international partners.

To be successful in achieving our mission of ready access to essential evidence, NARA must find technologies, techniques, and partners world-wide that can help improve service and hold down cost. Our involvement with intergovernmental records projects is one way we are working through cooperative partnerships to ease recordkeeping burdens on all levels of government. We will continue to support these projects.

But once essential evidence is created and earmarked for retention at the appropriate governmental level, it is equally important that the evidence is preserved. There can be no ready access without preservation. Yet floods, fires, and other disasters take a yearly toll on our nation's heritage as represented in records, books and artifacts. Too often, institutions are unprepared to cope with such events. In response to this challenge, archivists and librarians in several parts of the country have joined forces to form mutual assistance networks for disaster response.

Two networks in southern California have begun offering such services as low-cost staff training, shared disaster supplies stockpiles, and emergency staff assistance. These groups, including the Los Angeles Preservation Network and the Inland Empire Library Disaster Response Network, provide useful models for others to follow.

The need for mutual response was brought home last year in the San Francisco Bay area when two local governments experienced significant records disasters. In one case, fire damage to records ran into the millions of dollars. Neither jurisdiction was aware of the staff expertise of surrounding institutions and had to cope with their disasters alone. As a result, the Bay Area Preservation Network (BAPNet) is now working to establish a mutual assistance pact that will bring together public agencies and private corporations, as well as libraries and archives. I am pleased that NARA regional staff are playing a leading role in this network.

BAPNet is currently planning a symposium entitled "Lessons of a Records Disaster: The 1995 Contra Costa Courthouse Fire," to be held June 7 at the new Oakland Federal Building. The conference will assemble experts in fire protection, records management, materials conservation, disaster planning, archives, and other fields. The purpose is two-fold: to educate our constituencies on the need for a records preservation component in disaster planning and to promote the need for mutual assistance. For more information concerning this event and related activities, visit the BAPNet home page at http://palimpsest.stanford.edu/byorg/bapnet or call Richard Boyden at (415) 876-9084.

Additionally, we are using new technology to improve access to our holdings. Our Federal Records Center in Chicago has been involved in another pilot project to explore the costs and benefits of electronic delivery of reference requests. Conducted with the cooperation of the U.S. District Court in Detroit, the project substituted the postal or UPS delivery of requested court records stored at the Chicago center with electronic delivery. When the court requested a record, it was scanned and then faxed or e-mailed directly to the requester.

The court now receives most of their records within 24 hours of a request — as much as 10 days faster than by mail. Needless to say, the court's reaction has been overwhelmingly positive.

While analysis of the data collected over the last year is not yet complete, initial indications are that electronic document delivery is not only faster, but also less costly. Our Chicago center experienced an increase in personnel costs due to the additional handling required for scanning and faxing, but there was also a reduction in delivery costs. Overall it resulted in a modest decrease in total delivery costs. The new method also provides the important intangible benefit of enhanced document security by eliminating the need for the records to leave the protection of secured records center storage.

Throughout the country and at all levels of government cooperative efforts among archivists, librarians, and records managers have paved the way for better services at less cost. The National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC) has played a major role in fostering these efforts. That is why I am happy to report that Senator Mark Hatfield (R-Oregon), a member of the commission, has introduced legislation in the Senate to reauthorize the NHPRC for four more years. Senator Paul Sarbanes (D-Maryland), a former commission member, joined in the bill's introduction, giving it bipartisan support.

NHPRC itself has been established by statute since 1934, but periodically it must request congressional reauthorization to receive annual appropriations from the Congress for its grant program. The current, four-year authorization expires at the end of fiscal year 1997. The new bill, S1577, would extend that authorization from 1998 through 2001. The new bill also would authorize the commission to receive up to $10 million per year in appropriations for grants, which is the maximum currently authorized.

I am excited by the initiatives we have begun today and the possibilities for partnerships we have for the future, whether they are through NARA directly or through the NHPRC. It is vitally important that we continue to collaborate with local, state, and federal officials to meet mutual needs and solve mutual problems. I welcome your suggestions and comments on how we can take advantage of more intergovernmental partnerships.
Billington Testifies on FY'97 Budget for LC

On March 5, James Billington, the Librarian of Congress, testified before the House Subcommittee on Legislative Appropriations, chaired by Rep. Ron Packard (R-CA). Other members of the subcommittee present at the hearing were: Vic Fazio (D-CA) and Ranking Minority, Dan Miller (R-FL), and Charles Taylor (R-NC). In requesting a budget of $373 million, a 5.8% increase over the FY'96 budget, Billington stressed that the library is fundamentally different from any other institution in the legislative branch in that it serves not only the Congress but the entire nation. Billington stressed that, “knowledge and information are now the most important commodities of our age — and the largest supply in world history is here in the Library of Congress.” He also noted that the Library has become a world leader in providing high-quality content for the Internet.

Packard noted in his opening remarks that the library was the only legislative branch agency that did not have a major decrease last year and indicated that some reductions should be expected this year. In the question and answer portion, the members of the subcommittee expressed strong support for the library. Fazio asked questions about the status of the Copyright Office and about exhibit policy. On the matter of the plantation exhibit, Billington said that things should have been handled differently. Since it was a traveling exhibit and had not originally been scheduled to be at the library, Billington said that not all the appropriate steps had been taken. On the Freud exhibit he stressed that the exhibit had been canceled, just postponed, and that it is scheduled to open in 1998. Fazio noted that there is a need to deal with controversy without bowing to public pressure.

Several members had questions about the degree to which the library's Internet information services overlapped with those of the Government Printing Office’s Access online services. Packard requested the two agencies work closely together to integrate their programs for he said there it an appearance of duplication and competition. In discussing the GPO plan for the federal deposition library program to shift in the next two years to an electronic base, Billington pointed out that this will create problems with the current international exchange of material. Few of our foreign partners, he noted, will be able to accept our electronic documents and thus will not give us their paper documents, which enrich our collection.

There were several one-time additions to last year’s budget — such as the $4.5 million that Senator Bob Kerrey (D-NE) sponsored to increase electronic access and a $1.2 million in repairs at the Johnson Presidential Library — which account for the lower 1997 figure. The president has requested $4 million in FY'97 for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. It is currently funded at $5 million.

Network for Reporting Stolen and Missing Manuscripts

The Professional Autograph Dealers Association (PADA) recently established a system of reporting stolen or missing manuscripts from its membership. The system enables libraries and archives to spread the word quickly about any missing documents to many of the nation’s leading autograph dealers. The two-pronged system works as follows:

1. New discoveries of stolen or missing manuscripts. When autographed material is discovered missing or stolen, report it to PADA via a toll-free number: 1-888-33-THEFT. PADA will immediately disseminate the information to all of its members via a fax/phone chain. Such reports should identify the missing material in as much detail as possible. They should also include the name, address and phone number of the contact person at the institution involved and any law enforcement officials handling the case. Information about the disappearance, the date of the theft, or possible suspects should also be included.

2. Old thefts or missing manuscripts. PADA is also establishing a database of all manuscript material that is now known to be missing or stolen from libraries, archives, or private dealers. There is currently no such register in existence, so autograph dealers have nowhere to go to check whether a piece might be stolen. All libraries and archives are requested to send PADA a list of any manuscripts missing from their collections for entry into the database. The list should identify the material as precisely as possible and should provide any information about its disappearance that might help identify it. Please send the list to the address listed below. Note that the toll-free number is only for newly discovered stolen or missing manuscripts.

There is no fee for reporting any stolen or missing manuscripts to PADA. Rapid dissemination of news about recently stolen documents is often vital to their recovery and to the successful capture and prosecution of the thief. Please direct any inquiries to: Catherine Barnes, PADA Security Committee, P.O. Box 30117, Philadelphia, PA 19103, (215) 854-0175, fax (215) 854-0831.

NHPRC Recommends 63 Grants Totaling $3,144,129

The National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC) met on February 27 and recommended $1,463,968 for 29 continuing documentary editions projects; $128,878 for 14 publications subvention grants; $581,086 for five state board regrant projects; and $948,581 for 14 records access projects. Also recommended was $21,616 for one project to improve documentary editing, the 25th annual Institute for the Editing of Historical Documents. The grant recommendations were made in response to more than $5,750,000 in requests.

Grant application materials may be requested by phone or by mail: NHPRC, Room 607, National Archives Building (Archives 1), Washington, D.C. 20408, (202) 501-5610, fax (202) 501-5601, or nhprc@archl.nara.gov.

Archives of The New York Times

The Paper’s Papers: A Reporter’s Journey Through the Archives of The New York Times, by Richard F. Shepard (Times Books, May 1996, $30). Shepard, who spent nearly 50 years working as a reporter in various positions at the New York Times, has rifled the archives and dredged his memory to come up with a lively look at this 100-year-old family business. When Adolph Ochs took over the failing Times in 1896, he was determined to make it a financial success and to publish a paper that was independent and honest. He and his descendants who have run the paper left notes, memos, and letters that show some of the problems and triumphs of publishing a powerful newspaper. Plundering the archives, Shepard reveals how those difficult crossword puzzles got started, the background on the reporting of the Bay of Pigs invasion and the Pentagon Papers, and why the paper gives so much space to covering art, music, and literature. This book will be a part of the centennial exhibition of Times archival material that will open in June at the Morgan Library in New York. (Reprinted from Library Journal, March 15, 1996, p. 78.)

AIC Conservation Terminology

The American Institute for Conservation of Historic and Artistic Works (AIC) recently published a list of AIC Definitions of Conservation Terminology. The definitions are based on and updated from those found in AIC’s bylaws, fact sheet, Code of Ethics, and Guidelines for Practice, as well as from terminology published by allied groups such as the Society of American Archivists, International Council of Museums, International Institute for Conservation-Canadian Group, and the National Park Service. These definitions reflect an evolution of the profession and the multitude of preservation-related activities for which the conservation profession is now responsible. For your copy of AIC Definitions of Conservation Terminology, contact: AIC, 1717 K St. NW, Suite 301, Washington, D.C. 20006, (202) 452-9545, fax (202) 452-9328, or jennaic@aol.com.

Reports from Commission on Preservation and Access

- Digital Collections Inventory Report, by Patricia McClung (64 pages, February 1996, $20). Published jointly by the Commission on Preservation and Access and the Council on Library Resources, this report describes a preliminary project to determine how much digitizing of library collections is planned, in process, or completed. This investigation, envisioned as the first among many, addresses the question of how to keep abreast of what is available on the Internet and how to inventory what will be added.

- Preservation in the Digital World, by Paul Conway (24 pp., March 1996, $15). The report considers where the accumulated knowledge and experience of preservation management may be most effective, and where it may be more difficult to affect change. In making the case for a heightened role for preservation management, Conway argues that digital imaging technology is more than another reformatting option. Imaging, he states, involves transforming the very concept of format, rather than creating an accurate picture of a book, photograph, or map on a different medium. Thus, a digital world transforms traditional preservation concepts from protecting the physical integrity of the object to specifying the creation and maintenance of the object whose intellectual integrity is its primary characteristic.

- Preservation Activities in Canada: A Unifying Theme in a Decentralized Country, by Karen Turko, head of preservation services at the University of Toronto Library (February 1996, $10). Turko discusses Canadian preservation efforts from three perspectives: federal, decentralized, and local. The report covers accomplishments of such programs as the Canadian Council of Archives, Decentralized Program for Canadian Newspapers, Canadian Cooperative Preservation Project, and Advisory Committee on a Strategy for Preservation in Canadian Libraries.

All three of the above resources are available prepaid from: Commission on Preservation and Access, 1400 16th Street N.W., Suite 740, Washington, D.C. 20036-2117.

Quick Technology Tip:

Rules of Conduct for the Internet

There are some generally accepted rules, some of which are regarded as law, on the Internet. You may do well to follow them:

1. Don’t ramble. Rambling is annoying in most forms of communication, but in e-mail it’s unbearable. Be as brief as possible without losing the content or tone of your message.

2. Never e-mail something you would not say in person. If you would not say something to a person’s face, don’t say it electronically.

3. Re-read your message before sending it. About 90% of e-mail “netiquette” no-no’s result from the sender’s failure to read the message after it is written but before it is sent.

4. Don’t assume the recipient is the only person who will ever see your message. Your words are a reflection of you.

5. Don’t use all capital letters. Internet dwellers call this “shouting”; it’s also hard to read.

6. When replying, restate some of the original message. Answering a message by writing, “No, I don’t think so,” can be confusing. It’s even worse if you have not replied immediately to the message in question.

7. Check e-mail at least once a day. It’s good practice to check it four times a day while working.

Archival Outlook — May 1996 27
Passport to Russia and Poland

by Robert M. Warner, University of Michigan, Delegation Leader

Intellectually stimulating, exciting, challenging, and fun are all appropriate words to describe the tour of a wide variety of archives in St. Petersburg, Moscow, and Warsaw by a group of 25 archivists and allied academic colleagues. The trip took place from October 21 to November 4, 1995. The professional itinerary was rigorous, but there was time for impressive sight-seeing, gastronomic, and cultural adventures.

Delegates came from various archival institutions in the United States (plus one in The Netherlands) and from political science, Slavic studies, and similar related disciplines. We left from New York, stopped for five delightful hours in Helsinki (where we met Joan van Albada, our delegate from The Netherlands) and then on to our first archival stop — St. Petersburg.

If any member had forgotten that this handsome city on the Gulf of Finland was once the capital of Imperial Russia, the dazzling archives we saw refreshed and enhanced our memory of that period. We visited two of Russia’s most important national archives: the Russian State Historical Archives and the Russian State Archives of the Navy. The former held some of the richest collections from the earliest days of Russian history to 1917, including papers of the tsars, many government ministries, and notable Russians. At the Naval archives, the director and his staff pointed out that this archive, founded personally by Peter the Great in 1724, is one of the nation’s oldest and most important.

In both institutions, the staff and the delegates engaged in a lively discussion on a broad selection of topics, including the organizational structure of Russian archives, access issues, preservation, archival education, and the impact of new technologies. The director of the Naval archives noted the very difficult economic position of his institution (staff is down by 45 percent). This theme was repeated in most of our Russian archival visits. In addition to these institutions, we visited a library school and the city bureau of vital statistics. Some delegates also took advantage of an impromptu tour of the National Library including the library’s own archive.

Moving on to Moscow we found an equally warm reception from excellent guides and our Russian archival colleagues which, for me, included several archivists I had known before this trip. Here we encountered our first experience with modern records of the Soviet period. We were pleased and amazed at the openness we found at the State Archives Service of Russia. For example, Vladimir Tiuneyev, first deputy head, gave us an excellent overview of the Russian national archival system and the change that has occurred since the days of the Soviet Union. The discussion of access policies and declassification was informative and the display was of utmost interest to all of the delegates.

A visit to the State Archives of the Russian Federation, the depository of the records of the largest member of the former USSR, provided more examples of openness and lively discussions on contemporary archival topics. We also saw wonderful treasures from the Imperial period, including photographs, diaries and correspondence of various tsars and their families.

Early Russian history was also the principal focus of a third archives on our Moscow itinerary — the Russian State Archives of Ancient Acts, housed in the first building in Russia constructed specifically for archival use. Their magnificent materials dated back to the very beginning of Russian history.

Warsaw was our final stop. Our Polish colleagues matched the Russians in their openness and friendliness. Prof. Jerzy Skowronek, chief of the National Archives of Poland, provided us with a well-organized format for discussion of archival issues with his colleagues. We were impressed not only with the beauty of the conference room where we met, but with the extremely well-organized discussion we had with our Polish colleagues on problems of funding, access, professional education, and preservation (particularly the role of microfilming v. use of CD-ROM technology). In our tour of the stacks we observed first-hand the special problems facing Polish archives that have resulted from successive wars and the repeated dismemberment of the nation. We concluded our Polish archival adventures with a visit to the Archives of the Polish Academy of Science, where we encountered lively-minded hosts who kept our delegation busy discussing American practices and technology-driven changes taking place in the United States.

For all of us, we came to the end of our tour with feelings of great pleasure at our good fortune to have been a part of this educational and engaging trip that allowed us to see so much and make new friends among our own group as well as in our host countries. Our professional visits were rewarding, informative, and stimulating — and came wrapped in a handsome package of ballet, circus, concerts, magnificent museums, and wonderful historic sites. We were received with great courtesy and at a very high administrative level at all the archives we visited. The esprit de corps that developed among our delegates and their sophisticated intellectual contributions made for a delightful trip. A detailed report of our professional visits has been published by the organizer and sponsor of the tour, the Citizen Ambassador Program (People to People), based in Spokane, Washington. Their arrangements, from the professional itinerary to the accommodations selected, were superb.

Guide to British Archival Resources

British Archives: A Guide to Archive Resources in the United Kingdom has been revised and updated. The new volume contains over 1,200 entries covering the archival holdings of national and local authority record offices, national libraries and museums, university and college libraries and archives, societies and associations, and charities and private collections. The introduction provides information on how to use archives and includes a summary of archives-related legislation. British Archives was compiled and edited by Janet Foster of the University of Essex and Julia Shepard of the Wellcome Institution for the History of Medicine. For more information call toll free (800) 221-2123.

National Archives Policy for the United Kingdom

The National Archives Policy Liaison Group has released a statement entitled, “A National Archives Policy for the United Kingdom.” Organized in three parts, the statement offers twelve principles which should guide a national archives policy for the United Kingdom as a whole as well as its constituent countries. It also sets out a long-term program for implementing the twelve principles and presents a detailed discussion of the principles and implementation proposals. The National Archives Policy Liaison Group consists of representatives of the Archives Council of Wales, the Association of County Archivists, the British Records Association, the National Council on Archives, and the Society of Archivists. For more information on the statement, contact the Society of Archivists, Information House, 2224 Old Street, London EC1V 9AP England. Telephone: 44-171-253-5087. Fax: 44-171-253-3942.

Moscow Archives

The Economist (March 2, 1996) carried an article on the post-Soviet archives scene entitled, “The Battle for the Moscow Archives.” The article chronicles the efforts to open the various party and government archival fonds since the fall of the Soviet Union in 1989. While noting the availability of many formerly classified and secret documents, the article points out that many materials declassified in 1992 are no longer available for research. However, despite new restrictions, access to Russian archives is still progressing. While not as open as British or American national archival holdings, access to Russian materials is roughly comparable to that of France, the article says. It offers a description of the pitiful conditions in which archives are maintained and researched in Moscow: the staff salaries are miniscule and trained archivists are quitting the profession; facilities are in need of structural repair; elevators break down frequently; and microfilm readers are unusable due to blown-out bulbs. “To save archivists from poverty and protect tens of millions of files for the twenty-first century requires a substantial injection of money from private charities or international agencies,” it concludes.

Endangered Cultural Monuments

The World Monuments Fund recently announced its list of the world’s 100 most endangered cultural monuments. Included on the list are a work of Paleolithic rock art in Portugal, the ruins of a city in Zimbabwe dating from the fifteenth century, a Greco-Roman archaeological site in Albania, a 100-foot Bran­ cusci sculpture in Romania, and a nineteenth-century prison in Philadelphia. Each year the World Monuments Fund solicits nominations from governments, U.S. embassies, cultural organizations and private citizens. Two hundred fifty-three nominations were received this year. The selection committee favored nominations that contained a conservation plan. The World Monuments Funds has receives a $5 million grant from American Express to be put towards conservation efforts.

FELLOWSHIPS & AWARDS

Simmons College Fellowship
The Simmons College Archives, in conjunction with the Simmons Institute for Leadership and Change, is accepting applications for a fellowship to encourage use of the college’s archival collections. In addition to materials related to the history of Simmons College (founded in 1899), the collections have particular strengths in the history of women’s education, social work, nursing, librarianship, secretarial training, retailing, home economics, and children’s literature. Scholars whose work involves the study of the history of the changing roles of women within society, specifically as related to work, leadership, and education, are invited to apply. A stipend of $500 will be awarded for two weeks of research at the college archives during the 1996-97 academic year. The award is open to advanced or independent scholars, graduate students, and archives professionals. The award recipient will be expected to present a formal paper of discussion to the Simmons Institute upon completion of research.

Applications are due June 1, 1996. For an application form, contact: Simmons College Archives, 300 The Fenway, Boston, MA 02115, or e-mail: cgoodwin@vmsvax.simmons.edu.

Rockefeller Archive Center
For 1997 the Rockefeller Archive Center will have two components to its program of Grants for Travel and Research at the Rockefeller Archive Center. In addition to its regular competitive program that is open to researchers in any discipline engaged in research that requires use of its collections, the Center will award up to ten grants to support research on topics related to the continent of Africa. The competition for these targeted grants will use the same application form and follow the same guidelines as the general program. Applicants from within the U.S. and Canada may request support of up to $1,500; because of the additional cost of travel, applicants from other nations may request up to $2,000. Applicants wishing to be considered for the special grant program on Africa should indicate this in a cover letter. The deadline for application is November 30, 1996; grant recipients will be announced in March 1997. For application forms and additional information about Archive Center’s grant programs, contact the director, Darwin H. Stapleton, at the Rockefeller Archive Center, 15 Dayton Avenue, North Tarrytown, NY 10591-1598 or call (914)631-4505.

Library of Congress
Junior Fellows Program

NHPRC Fellowships in Archival Administration: Apply to be a Host Institution
For the 1997-98 year the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC) is offering one fellowship in archival administration. The commission is now accepting applications from archival repositories interested in serving as a host institution for the fellow to be selected. Not-for-profit organizations and institutions, state and local government agencies, and federally-acknowledged or state-recognized native American tribes or groups are eligible to apply. The position will focus on active-hands-on experience in administration and management. The application receipt deadline is October 1, 1996. Interested archives should contact NHPRC to discuss its application. For guidelines and application forms, contact: NHPRC, National Archives Building (Archives 1), Room 607, Washington, D.C. 20408 or call Laurie A. Baty at (202) 501-5610.

THE LEADER IN DATA NAVIGATION

Come to Booth #11 to see how powerful GENCAT really is. We can show you why so many people select GENCAT:

- Multi-Level Model (RAD) - supporting automatic links between groups, series, sub-series, files and items.
- Data Inheritance - giving complete information at any entry point while avoiding redundant entry of information such as administrative histories and biographic sketches or the need for global changes.
- Hierarchical Thesaurus - subject terms, corporate and organizational names, personal names, geographic locations, and events automatically linked to holdings.
- Integrated System - linking accessioning, description, research, circulation, and statistical reporting.
- MARC Compliant - for AMC as well as the new Integration Format; very easy to use.
- Internet Access - with the new GENCAT Server any authorized person with a Web Browser can access your database using Z39.50 or common gateway access.

Join with the American Film Institute, The National Archives of Canada, The University of Wyoming American Heritage Centre, and over 700 others who use GENCAT for archives, library, museum, and records management.

Executive Director

and an active participant in the Conference on Fair Use, said in a recent speech to the National Federation of Abstracting and Information Services:

"The central issue here is the proposed transmission right. Adding this to the rights of copyright holders without a clearly stated understanding of what would constitute fair use in digital environments could rip apart the carefully constructed balances of copyright law. When and under what conditions could users, under a claim of fair use, transmit copyrighted materials, or make use of transmitted materials? We would not know. And for the health of education and scholarship it is very important that we do know."

Although the House recently concluded its hearings on the bill, the Senate will continue to hold hearings throughout this spring. Fortunately, it is unlikely either of these bills will pass during the current legislative term. They will undoubtedly resurface next year, however, and we will need to be prepared to act quickly.

Copyright Term Extension

The other legislation of importance to archivists, H.R. 989 and S. 483, the Copyright Term Extension Act of 1995, proposes an extension of copyright protection from life-plus-50-years to life-plus-70-years. Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) introduced this bill on March 2, "in order to bring our laws into alignment with changes in European laws which are operating under a directive from the Council of European Communities to attain a life-plus-70 minimum term of protection by July of this year." This bill also proposes to increase copyright term extension on anonymous and pseudonymous works by an additional 20 years.

Fortunately, as Page Miller reported in January, Register of Copyright Marybeth Peters does not endorse this proposed extension for unpublished material. "Peters noted that in the 1976 Copyright Act, all unpublished works in existence before January 1, 1978, even letters and diaries dating back to the 18th century, were automatically given copyright protection until December 31, 2002," Miller reported. "Pointing out the difficulty of finding heirs of very old unpublished material to grant permission for use, she stressed the negative impact this legislation would have on the Library of Congress’ development of its digital library, which hopes to make many historic photos, letters, and manuscripts in its collection available to the American public."

Karen Benedict added that “there is pressure from SAA and other interested organizations to exempt unpublished materials from the copyright extension since there is no material benefit to anyone from such an extension. As Congress struggles to craft new legislation that governs the use of the Internet to disseminate information, archivists must help define how that legislation will affect unpublished materials and archives’ goals to make them available for research and to a broad public.”

Not long ago I spent a week in Washington, D.C., meeting with policymakers on the Hill and with allied organizations to present our viewpoint and to leverage our interests within coalitions. The Task Force on Intellectual Property Strategies will play an important role in developing position papers on these issues and you can be assured that SAA will be an active discussant and advocate for archives and archivists in these critical debates.
CIA's Historical Review Panel Releases Report

On February 5, the newly constituted CIA Historical Review Panel met for the first time. On March 6, John Lewis Gaddis, a member of the panel and a professor of history at Ohio University on leave this year at the Woodrow Wilson Center, sent to John Deutch, the Director of Central Intelligence, a report summarizing the results of the meeting. After a number of presentations in the morning, the panel went into executive session in the afternoon and formulated its observations and recommendations.

While the report lays out a number of recommendations regarding a plan for declassification of materials, the report stated: “First priority within such a plan should go to transferring early CIA records to the National Archives and making them available to researchers. The panel feels strongly that, although commendable in themselves, the history staff’s publications as well as its cooperation with the Department of State’s Foreign Relations series do not substitute for the declassification and opening of the agency’s records in bulk form and in substantial quantity, so that non-government scholars will be in a position to make their own judgments about representativeness and relative significance.” The panel reaffirmed the recommendations of the CIA’s predecessor historical review panel which had called for the declassification of CIA records according to the principles of “top down,” referring to high level policy records, and “oldest first.”

while limiting the impact on resources by adopting a tripartite approach. First, SAA should look for opportunities where it can partner with related professional associations on issues of mutual concern . . . Secondly, SAA should draw on the expertise and enthusiasm of its members to identify and work on issues of particular concern . . . Lastly, there are some issues that are so central to the profession that SAA, as it has in the past, may need to redirect resources to actively work in these areas. Unfortunately, SAA is not large nor rich enough to be able to easily and quickly transfer funds, and on many issues of professional concern speed is of the essence. SAA should investigate the possibility of reserving some income for the support of the profession.”

Hirtle has been a member of SAA since 1986. He is an instructor of the SAA workshop “Cyberspace for Archivists,” has served on the Task Force on the National Information Infrastructure (1995), chaired the Committee on Archival Information Exchange (1992-95), and is a member of the Manuscripts Section Steering Committee (1993-). He is also a member of the Mid-Atlantic Regional Archives Conference and has authored chapters in three books and seven articles in archival and information science journals.

Euro Commission on Preservation and Access WWW

The European Commission on Preservation and Access (ECPA) has established a World Wide Web site, the European Preservation Information Center (EPIC). It was created to provide access to all information on preservation issues for those concerned with the preservation of the documentary heritage in Europe. EPIC consists of an introduction to ECPA, its aims and activities, a list of founding members; a news section with announcements, a calendar, conference summaries, and the current contents of some ten journals; a publications list and a list of institutes and organizations working in the preservation field with a brief introduction. You can reach EPIC at: http://www.library.knaw.nl/epic/ecpatex/welcome.html.

You can also join the discussion list by sending a one-line message <subscribe EPIC-LST name> to: listserv@nic.surfnet.nl.

New School of Information at University of Michigan

The University of Michigan has established the School of Information to educate graduate students for professional and teaching careers in human-centered information access, management, and systems. The new school will pioneer the development and application of unifying principles that clarify the role of information at all levels in a community. The expanded curriculum includes librarianship, next generation systems architecture, human-computer interaction, organizational information systems, archives and records management, and digital publishing. Additional details about the School of Information are available on the U/M home page at http://www.si.umich.edu/.

New Addition to SARA's Technical Info Series

Fundamentals of Managing Local Government Archival Records is the latest addition to the New York State Archives and Records Administration’s Local Government Records Technical Information Series. LIBRARIAN I, CURATOR

Special Collections in Performing Arts
University of Maryland-College Park
College Park, Maryland

The Music (soon to be Performing Arts) Library serves the educational and research needs of the campus' students of music, dance, and (soon) theater, as well as scholars, teachers, performers, and others worldwide. A new library facility in the Maryland Center for the Performing Arts will open in 1999. Special Collections in Performing Arts (SCPA) is one of three components of the Music Library, along with the International Piano Archives at Maryland (IPAM) and the Reference and Circulation Unit. SCPA is rich in materials for the study of music in American culture and the arts in education; currently its collections include the archives of sixteen national and international music organizations, related special collections in all formats, and the papers of a number of individuals—to which will be added archival collections in theater and dance.

Responsibilities: The curator of special collections in performing arts administers the work of the unit. Supervises the organization and archival processing of SCPA's acquisitions and the processing of archival collections throughout the Music Library. Provides library services to the campus community and to users worldwide. Works actively with the head of the Performing Arts Library to seek gifts of materials and collections in music, theater, and dance from private individuals, organizations, and corporations as well as to raise funding in support of the special collections. Takes an active role in professional and scholarly associations whose collections are represented in SCPA, and works with the head to promote the libraries through the production of exhibitions and publications.

Qualifications: Required: ALA-accredited master's degree in library science. Music studies resulting in demonstrated musical knowledge and experience. Three years of progressively responsible archival experience with demonstrated abilities in acquiring, processing, and assisting users of archival materials. Understanding of and experience with the application of information technology in archives including scholarly communication and user services. Proven ability to communicate and work cooperatively in an innovative atmosphere with donors, scholars, administrators, colleagues, and employees.

Preferred: A graduate degree in a performing arts discipline. Demonstrated scholarship in an area of the American performing arts and/or arts education.

Salary: Commensurate with experience. Benefits available. To apply: Submit resume and names/addresses of three references by June 7, 1996. Applications accepted until position is filled. Send resume to: Ray Foster, Library Personnel Services, McKeldin Library, University of Maryland, College Park, MD 20742-7011; fax: (301) 314-9960. AA/EOE. Minorities are encouraged to apply.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI (MU) was established in Columbia in 1839. It is one of the five most comprehensive universities in the nation, with over 250 degree programs. The MU Libraries belong to ARL, serve a student body of 22,000+ and a faculty of 1,800 with a collection of over 2.6 million volumes and over 5.3 million microforms. The Libraries on all campuses are replacing a local system with III.

Columbia is in the middle of the state on I-70, only 2 hours from St. Louis and Kansas City, and 1.5 hours from the Lake of the Ozarks major recreational area. The University and two other colleges provide superb cultural events. According to the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association (ACCRA) composite index, the cost of living in Columbia is very reasonable when compared with other university communities. Columbia has been named in the top twenty cities in the United States by Money magazine in recent years.

Available: August 1, 1996.

Send letter of application, names and addresses of three references and resume to Julie Deters, Senior Secretary, 104 Ellis Library, University of Missouri-Columbia, Columbia, MO 65201-5149. Screening of applications will begin June 10, 1996. The University of Missouri-Columbia is an equal opportunity and affirmative action employer and complies with the guidelines set forth in the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990. If you have special needs as addressed by the ADA and need assistance with this or any portion of the application, notify us at the address above as soon as possible. Reasonable efforts will be made to accommodate your special needs.
The Society of American Archivists is celebrating its 60th birthday this year. How well do you know your professional association? Below are six questions spanning six decades of Society people, places, and things. Answer all of the following questions correctly and you could be the lucky winner of a $60 gift certificate good toward your next SAA publications purchase. Here are the rules: To play, you must be a current individual or institutional member of SAA. Answers must be received in the SAA office by June 7, 1996. All six questions must be answered correctly in order to win. There will be only one contest winner (in the event more than one contestant answers all the questions correctly, their names will be tossed in a hat and one name drawn). No fair asking SAA staffers for hints, answers, or affirmations!

Mail, fax, or e-mail your responses to the following six questions, along with your name, address, and phone number, by June 7, 1996, to: Teresa Brinati, SAA Trivia Contest, 600 S. Federal, Suite 504, Chicago, IL 60605; e-mail: tbrinati@saa.mhs.compuserve.com; or fax (312) 347-1452.
