President's Message

by William J. Maher, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

"The things that people say"

I recently heard from an SAA member unhappy with implementation of recommendations of the Task Force on Organizational Effectiveness regarding an organizational unit. The communication offered the troubling observation that the process might be seen by some as confirming "those nasty things that people say about SAA." Although I have been known to speak critically of SAA (see my 1986 candidate statement, for example), I have also come to understand the fundamental importance of SAA to all archivists. I would therefore like to use this column to call for members to let us know the critical as well as the good things that can be said about SAA so that these perspectives can shape upcoming discussions to make SAA a better and more effective organization.

Now is a particularly important time to look at what kind of value members find in SAA. We have experienced a recent decline in membership even though we have instituted more active membership recruitment and launched a mentoring program. We have become more active on current technological issues to maintain our relevance in a changing information environment, and we have become active in several aspects of advocacy on archival and information policy issues.

At the same time, with electronic communication technology, such as that found in electronic lists and Web sites, we have seen that as a national professional organization we no longer occupy the strategic place in the professional information pipeline that provides guaranteed membership and significant financial support. Following a recent reexamination of our structure and the relationships of the groups within SAA, we are working through the kind of reorganization that we know, from experience in our own institutions, risks alienating members. Yet we know and believe that membership must indeed be the most important value to SAA.

Our call for what you have to say about SAA has an immediate objective—during March, two key task forces (on the Annual Meeting and on Dues and Member Benefits) will be meeting to consider changes that may have broad effects on SAA. Later this spring, Council will be preparing for its June planning day discussion focusing on the very nature of membership in SAA as well as on how Council might restructure itself and how we might move to develop a new strategic plan.

In making this call for members to tell us what they do and do not value in SAA, we know that a commercially produced survey, as was done recently on salaries and educational needs, might provide a more systematic overview. Even if time and budget allowed for such a professional survey, we would still need to hear the voice of our members through thoughtful anecdotal perspectives—a sort of collective brainstorming so that the task forces and Council will be able to operate with actual comments, not just their own personal impressions.

In calling for comment, I have given some thought to listing a few of the good and bad things I have been known to say about SAA, but without the help of a fine single malt, none of you would have the patience for the saga. More importantly, it might limit the discussion, which should be shaped by you. To ensure that your comments will be usable, I suggest you consider some parameters for the discussion. These include, the purpose and nature of a national professional organization, the limits of our size and resources, the importance of volunteer contributions in the organization, and the value of intangible as well as tangible products of SAA.

To start discussion, I suggest you put yourself in the role of a resource manager and consider: "What aspects of SAA should receive a greater priority? What can/should be sacrificed to achieve these priorities? What elements do we need to hold onto at all costs? What do you have to say about SAA?"

Send your comments to me at the address that follows and/or send them to the chair of the Dues and Member Benefits Task Force: James E. Fogerty, Minnesota Historical Society, 345 Kellogg Boulevard West, St. Paul, MN 55102-1906, james.fogerty@mnhs.org.

Maximize Your Potential—
SAA Continuing Professional Education

"Managing an archives in a business environment challenges the archivist with a range of issues not typically covered in the standard archival course. SAA's workshop 'Business Archives: The Basics and Beyond' helped prepare me to meet those challenges. SAA workshops will help you maximize your potential as an archival professional!"

Copyright Legislation

These are always busy times for SAA, but especially so lately due to increased congressional activity surrounding important copyright legislation. Working with our partners in the Digital Future Coalition, SAA sent letters to each member of Congress urging them to co-sponsor two very important bills (see next page), Senator John Ashcroft’s (R-MO) S. 1146, the Digital Copyright Clarification and Technology Act, and a companion bill recently introduced into the House by Representatives Rick Boucher (D-VA) and Tom Campbell (R-CA): HR.3048, the Digital Era Copyright Enhancement Act. These are both important bills because they safeguard fair use in the digital environment. The threat to fair use at this time is quite high and it is only about once every 20 years that Congress addresses copyright laws, hence it is critical that the archival community keep in close touch with your legislators to support these bills.

In order to understand why these bills are important it is necessary to understand the current environment which swamped their introduction. The Clinton Administration has a parallel bill it strongly supports, the “World Intellectual Property Organization Copyright (WIPO) Treaties Implementation Act,” which contends that it is necessary for the U.S. to comply with international copyright laws and to give copyright holders—such as large media and software companies—the legal power to protect their property from illegal electronic distribution.

But the truth is, this law threatens to obliterate fair use and thus create a digital environment where teachers, archivists, librarians, and others will not be able to use the Internet for such advantageous purposes as distance learning, or to mount digitized collections for increased access, or even to temporarily download information into a computer’s RAM without fear of prosecution. The fear is quite real, as anecdotes increasingly circulate about lawyers pursuing Web page authors for violating copyright, and Internet service providers for culpability.

What the authors of S. 1146 and HR. 2281 advocate is not unfettered use of proprietary information, but a balanced approach to copyright which respects the rights of both copyright owners and users. There following seven areas that HR. 2281 specifically addresses are critical to a revised copyright act.

Fair Use. Section 2 would amend section 107 of the Copyright Act to reaffirm that a finding of fair use may be made without regard to the means by which a work has been performed, displayed, or distributed. In other words, just as teachers, librarians, and others may make fair use copies of portions of copyrighted works today in the analog world, so would they retain this right in tomorrow’s digital world.

Library Preservation. Section 3 would amend section 108 of the Copyright Act to allow archives and libraries to use new forms of technology to make three copies of endangered materials for archival purposes. (N.B. We are also in discussion with the authors of the bill to amend this section to more clearly articulate the need to migrate preservation copies across platforms without having them ultimately become considered “transformative copies.” We will have an opportunity to address this issue when the bill goes to markup.)

First Sale. Section 4 would amend Section 109 of the Copyright Act to establish the digital equivalent of the “first sale” doctrine. Under current law, a person who has legally obtained a book or video cassette may physically transfer it to another person without permission of the copyright owner. Section 4 would permit electronic transmission of a lawfully acquired digital copy of a work as long as the person making the transfer eliminates or erases that copy of the work from his or her system at substantially the same time as he or she makes the transfer.

Distance Learning. Section 5 would amend sections 110(2) and 112(b) of the Copyright Act to ensure that educators can use personal computers and new technology in a broad range of educational settings in the same way they now use television to foster distance learning. In addition, Section 5 would broaden the range of works that may be performed, displayed, or distributed to include the various kinds of works that might be included in a multimedia lesson.

Ephemeral Copies. Section 6 would amend section 117 of the Copyright Act to make explicit that electronic copies of material incidentally or

Help Us Decorate Our New Digs

Greetings from our sparkling new offices at 527 South Wells Street in Chicago! We moved into our new space the first week in February and it already feels as if we’ve been here for months, in spite of the unpacked boxes and files! I hope you will drop by to see us the next time you are in Chicago. We would love to offer you a cup of coffee or tea and show off our new space. When you come, you’ll notice that we have plenty of brightly painted white walls in need of decoration. If you have any materials from your archives worthy of framing, please send them along! Any and all donations will be greatly appreciated—they don’t have to be framed, we’ll take care of that. I’m eager for our suite to reflect the richness and diversity of your collections. Please send donations to: Susan Fox, SAA, 527 Wells St., 5th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

Representative Newt Gingrich
U.S. House of Representatives
2428 Rayburn Office Bldg.
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Speaker:

I am writing to you as President of the Society of American Archivists, North America’s oldest and largest professional archival association. SAA has a membership of 3,500 individuals and institutions concerned with the identification, preservation, and use of records of historic value. Our members are drawn from government agencies, colleges, universities, historical societies, museums, libraries, businesses and religious institutions. We strongly encourage you to co-sponsor HR. 3048, the Digital Copyright Clarification and Technology Education Act, recently introduced by Representatives Rick Boucher and Tom Campbell. SAA supports this legislation because it promotes innovation, broad public access, and education at every level, while also protecting copyright in the digital era. Only a comprehensive and balanced legislation can achieve both of these aims.

In fulfilling their responsibility to identify, secure, preserve and make accessible the documentary heritage of society, archivists are deeply concerned about some of the proposals for implementing the World Intellectual Property Organization treaties. In particular, archivists have been troubled by proposals that would abridge the public and scholarly users’ ability to access historical documents under the “fair use” provisions of the copyright act. At the same time, archivists look to continued, if not expanded, support of the concept of fair use in application to our management of collections. Only with a robust support for fair use will archivists be able to take advantage of new electronic technologies to bring the riches we hold to the benefit of the public at large.

Your co-sponsorship of HR. 3048 is important to us. By doing so you will significantly enable archives’ mission to make our nation’s cultural heritage widely accessible and thus support the progress of science and the useful arts.

Thank you very much for your time and attention to this issue. We stand ready to speak on its behalf. We greatly appreciate your efforts to maintain in the digital environment the productive balance that currently exists in the print world between the interests of copyright owners and users.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. MAHER

Council Report

Editor's Note: SAA Council meets four times a year—in January, June, and twice during the annual meeting. What follows is an unofficial summary of the January 23-25, 1998, Council meetings in Washington, D.C. The full official minutes will be published in the American Archivist.

January 23, 1998

Present at this meeting were: President William Maher, Vice President Luciana Duranti, Treasurer Robert Sink, and Council Members Valerie Browne, Bruce Brumme, Lynette Eaton, Anne Gilliland-Swetland, Lori Hefner, Peter Hirte, Karen Jefferson, Helen Tibbo, and Sharron Uhler. U.S. Archivist John Carlin, Deputy Archivist Lewis Bellardo, Peter Jaszi of the Digital Future Coalition, and Page Miller of the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History participated for part of the meeting. Executive Director Susan Fox served ex officio and meetings director Debra Mills was also present.

Report of the President

Maher welcomed Council members to the meeting and complimented them on their effective use of the Council listserv, which he said became an effective decision-making tool.

Report of the Vice President

Duranti reported that she appointed Tim Ericson as chair of the 1999 Program Committee as well as appointed three co-chairs for the 1999 Host Committee: Ed Galloway, Miriam Meislik, and Steven Hussman. She said that although Michael Miller had initially agreed to chair the Appointments Committee, he found that professional burdens were such that continuing in that role was impossible. Because of the pressing need to make appointments on a timely basis, Duranti asked for Council's guidance on how best to proceed. Hefner suggested Duranti contact some recent past presidents to enlist their assistance in the process. (Duranti subsequently reported that Sharon Thibodeau agreed to chair the Appointments Committee).

Report of the Executive Committee

Brumme reported that the Executive Committee explored how best to structure Council's discussion of issues related to the Recommendations of the Task Force on Organizational Effectiveness (TFOE). The Executive Committee also discussed the executive director review process. Sink read into the minutes a list of Executive Committee actions taken over the listserv between September and January. He said Council needed to revisit the listserv guidelines often in order to continually refine the process.

Report of the Treasurer

Sink reported that December 31 marked the end of the second quarter, and while SAA was hewing to budget, two program areas bore attention: workshop income and annual meeting income, both of which failed to meet projections. While other revenues remained strong, overall the fiscal condition of SAA was neither great nor dire. Sink then presented the auditor's report and moved its adoption. Hefner seconded. Hefner expressed concern regarding the audit point that SAA did not have clear documentation of its special project funds. Maher appointed a subcommittee of Council to further investigate. Council then voted unanimous acceptance of the report.

Sink presented the auditor's management letter and a discussion ensued of the points contained therein. Hirtle moved and Eaton seconded the motion that the treasurer and executive director jointly designate authorized check signers. Passed.

Report of the Executive Director

Mills reported on her site visits to Baltimore and Washington, D.C., as potential sites for the 2001 annual meeting. Mills said she did not receive any information from Baltimore in spite of repeated requests to the Baltimore convention bureau and to a number of the city's hotels. She said this was unprecedented in her career as a meeting planner but because of the lack of responsiveness, she had no choice but to recommend Washington, D.C. She said she would investigate the situation in Baltimore further, but only to communicate to city officials her displeasure at their unwillingness to provide information in a timely manner. Hefner moved and Tibbo seconded the motion to select Washington, D.C., as the site for the 2001 annual meeting. Passed.

Fox noted that the terms of the Publications Editor and the Editor of the American Archivist would conclude on December 31, 1998. She said that if the current editors expressed an interest in continuing she would convene a working group to review their performance and recommend next steps.

Eaton moved and Brumme seconded the motion that Fox should determine whether or not the editors have an interest in continuing in their positions and if so convene a working group including Tibbo to evaluate options on how best to continue. Fox will report back to the June council meeting with a recommended action. Passed.

Council then welcomed Page Putnam Miller to the meeting and received a report and engaged in a discussion of NCC activities.

Council then welcomed U.S. Archivist John Carlin and Deputy Archivist Lewis Bellardo to the meeting and received a report and engaged in a discussion of NARA activities.

Council finally welcomed Peter Jaszi of the Digital Future Coalition to the meeting and received a report and engaged in discussion of DFC activities, especially relating to copyright legislation.

Report of Council Committees

Gilliland-Swetland presented revised guidelines for the Committee on Education and Professional Development that would implement TFOE recommendations and incorporate the Education Office Advisory Board into its charge. She moved and Eaton seconded the motion to adopt the revised charge. After a few editorial revisions the motion passed.

Brumme moved and Duranti seconded the motion to disband the Education Office Advisory Board. Passed.
Gilliland-Swetland presented a request from the Public Information Committee to engage in a campaign to identify the ten most important documents from the past century and to engage in a public awareness campaign. After discussion, Hefner moved and Bruemmer seconded the motion that Council thank the committee for placing the idea before Council. However, the proposal brought out the larger issue of the core mission of the committee and how SAA could be most effective in public affairs. Council charged that Bruemmer and Gilliland-Swetland work with the committee co-chairs to refine its mission and discuss the future of the committee. Passed.

Report of the Council Committee on Sections and Roundtables

Hefner reported that the majority of SAA sections and roundtables were in a wait and see mode pending the outcome of the Task Force on Organizational Effectiveness and the proposal for member interest groups. Jefferson said she would compile a list of the results from the leadership luncheon and distribute to the leadership listserv.

Committee on Task Forces, Boards and Representatives

Bruemmer presented a report from the American Archivist editorial Board responding to a proposal from Kluwer International to take over the production and distribution of journal. After Council discussion of the possible pros and cons of the proposal, Duranti moved and Hefner seconded the motion that Bruemmer communicate to the editorial Board working group that they should explore the concept of producing an RFP to commercialize the publishing of the American Archivist. Then, if it seems to be a sound proposition to produce an RFP, they develop one for jobbing out services in support of enhancing the journal along the lines of, but not exclusively, what was incorporated in the Kluwer proposal. Passed.

Council entered executive session to discuss the schedule for the executive director's evaluation and contract.

January 24, 1998

Task Force on Organizational Effectiveness

Council addressed each of the TFOE recommendations in depth. The following motions evolved from this discussion:

Hirtle moved and Sink seconded the motion to accept the Standards Board proposal for reorganization and directed the affected units to continue to develop the proposal through the creation of committee charges and guidelines. Passed.

Duranti moved and Uhler seconded the motion that the president establish a task force to identify the type of international involvement SAA should have, its purposes, and the means of achieving such involvement. The task force would present recommendations by May 15. Passed, with Hefner opposed.

Bruemmer moved and Duranti seconded the motion that Council freeze membership in CIAA until Council has had the opportunity to assess the results of the task force. Passed.

Bruemmer moved and Duranti seconded the motion that Council freeze membership in the Legal and Legislative Affairs Committee. Further, that Council liaison Eaton should receive a report from the committee to evaluate the nature of legal and legislative advice the committee could provide to Council, especially in light of Council's own increased work in this area. Such report would be due by May 15 for discussion at the June Council meeting. Passed, with Hefner abstaining.

Sink moved and Duranti seconded the motion that whereas in view of the communications between Maher to Baty on December 1 and Baty to Maher on January 5, the Committee on the Status of Women create a petition to establish a Roundtable on Women's Professional Archival Issues consistent with the concerns expressed in the closing portions of Baty's letter. Aye: Bruemmer, Duranti, Eaton, Sink. Nay: Browne, Hefner, Tibbo, Uhler. Abstain: Hirtle, Gilliland-Swetland, Jefferson. The vote being tied, Maher cast a vote of aye and the motion passed.

Uhler presented a report from the 1997 Nominating Committee addressing recruitment of candidates for elected positions. Uhler moved and Eaton seconded the motion that Council thank the Nominating Committee for their hard work in researching and presenting the report. She further moved that Council ask the Nominating Committee to create position descriptions to be given to prospective nominees. Passed.

Hirtle moved and Eaton seconded the motion that the Council liaison to the Committee on Archival Information Exchange (CAIE) convey the sense of Council that the liaison from the Descriptive Standards Section should be welcome in discussion and further to TFOE discussions that CAIE draw up guidelines describing the parameters of an Encoded Archival Description working group, to include an International Congress on Archives representative in those guidelines. Passed.

The meeting adjourned at 10:40 a.m. on Sunday, January 25.

temporarily made in the process of using a computer or computer network may not serve as the sole basis for copyright infringement liability, such as when a work is viewed on the Web.

Unfair Licenses. Section 7 would effectively preclude copyright owners from using non-negotiable license terms to abrogate or narrow rights and use privileges that consumers otherwise would enjoy under the Copyright Act, such as fair use privilege, by preempting state common and statutory law, such as the proposed changes to the Uniform Commercial Code.

Black Boxes. Section 8 would implement the anti-circumvention and copyright management information provisions of the WIPO Copyright Treaty and the WIPO Performances and Phonograms Treaty. The treaties do not require the broad prohibition of software and devices that might be used by infringers as proposed in the legislation drafted by the Clinton Administration. Consistent with the treaties, Section 8 would create liability only for a person who, for purposes of infringement, knowingly circumvents the operation of an effective technological measure used by a copyright owner to limit reproduction of a work in a digital format. The bill also would create liability for a person who knowingly provides false copyright management information or removes or alters copyright management information without the authority of the copyright owner, and with the intent to mislead or induce or facilitate infringement.

These seven sections comprise an exceptionally strong bill which needs our support. Rarely do we have the opportunity to amend or protect copyright law. It’s vitally important that we do so now. Please write to your senators and representatives. Ask them to co-sponsor either Sen. John Ashcroft’s S.1146 or Rep. Rick Boucher and Rep. Tom Campbell’s HR. 2281. The message in Washington is clear: your letters do count and have a profound impact. Archivists are good at speaking out on important issues. This is one time when your voice is needed most of all.

Following Council consultation with the chair of the committee, Gilliland-Swetland moved and Duranti seconded the motion that Council disband the Committee on Institutional Evaluation and Development. Passed.

Proposed SAA Archives Listserv

Bruemmer reported on discussions with John Harlan regarding Harlan’s request that SAA assume management of the Archives and Archivists Listserv. He then moved and Browne seconded the motion that SAA pursue guardianship of the list through a third party volunteer. Passed.

Maher appointed a working group consisting of Bruemmer, Fox, Hirtle, and Tibbo to investigate the fiscal implications of SAA assuming management of the list. He charged the working group to report its findings to Council by May 15 for discussion at the June Council meeting.

Maher presented a letter from the Australian Society of Archivists requesting that SAA endorse ASA’s position on a political controversy in that country regarding management of public archives. The sense of Council was that the decision made at the September Council meeting not to become involved still stood. Council agreed to write a letter to the ASA commenting on the relevant archival principles relating to the case.

The Society of American Archivists (SAA) is pleased to announce that the SAA Employment Bulletin is now available online. The bulletin contains listings of career opportunities for archival professionals. Beginning in April listings will be updated weekly.

SAA is happy to provide this online tool in response to the overwhelming demand for electronic access to job listings. “SAA is constantly striving to enhance membership services and online access to these job opportunities is just one example,” SAA Executive Director Susan Fox said.

This effort contributes to SAA’s strategic goals by broadening the scope of the bulletin’s audience and improving the visibility of the archival profession. Additionally, this increased visibility will assist a broader range of employers who are seeking archival professionals as well as improve the career resources SAA provides to members. “It’s a win-win situation for both prospective employers and prospective employees,” Fox noted.

To access the bulletin go to SAA’s home page at http://www.archivists.org and then click on the button at right marked “Employment Bulletin.” Follow the links and you will access an alphabetical listing of job opportunities.

A print version of the SAA Employment Bulletin will continue to be published bi-monthly and available for a fee to subscribers. In addition, job announcements will continue to appear in the “Professional Opportunities” department in Archival Outlook, SAA’s bi-monthly newsletter.

Advertisers interested in obtaining more information about promoting staffing opportunities via SAA’s online bulletin should contact Teresa Brinati, Director of Publications, at 312/922-0140, fax 312/347-1452, or via e-mail, tbrinati@archivists.org.

Visit SAA’s New Digs!

The Society of American Archivists’ headquarters has relocated to the recently renovated Hunter Building at 527 S. Wells Street, a scant three blocks from its previous location. A solitary eight-story building on the edge of Chicago’s South Loop at the corner of Wells Street and Congress Parkway, the office is steps away from the central business district and easily accessible via public transportation or car.

The new office suite encompasses the entire fifth floor and will allow SAA staff room to grow as it expands its services to the membership. A section of the office is devoted to on-site storage of publication resources to enhance order fulfillment and shipping. A spacious conference room is situated in the center of the suite and will accommodate a number of meetings that previously required rental of external meeting space. The lunchroom, which overlooks the Chicago Stock Exchange, is cozy and a welcome addition.

There is now a central computer room as well a designated communications area which is home to two laser printers, a fax machine, and a photocopier.

SAA Executive Director Susan Fox has big plans for decorating the expans of freshly painted walls with gifts donated by members which highlight the richness and diversity of their archival collections. In addition to adding a touch of class to the decor, these photographs and images would communicate to visitors the nature and scope of the archival profession. Please send artwork to: Susan Fox, The Society of American Archivists, 527 S. Wells St., 5th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607.

Staff is settling in to the sunny new surroundings and looks forward to continuing to provide excellent service to members from its new home. This is an exciting move for SAA as it enters the new millennium. So come by and visit the next time you are in Chicago!

Tours Planned that Highlight Florida History and Ecology

The 1998 Host Committee has been busy planning tours for SAA's 62nd annual meeting in Orlando that showcase the rich history and lush scenery that central Florida has to offer. Following is a glimpse of what to expect:

Tour of Ybor City in Tampa — A walking tour of this historic Cuban settlement will be conducted by the Ybor City Museum Society. Emigrating to Tampa around the turn of the century, Cubans started the cigar industry in this area of Tampa that has maintained its ethnic face. Ybor city offers authentic Cuban restaurants, shopping, and architecture. Tour participants will enjoy a sampling of each!

Tour of Tebeau Library of the Florida Historical Society — In its new quarters, the Tebeau Library houses one of a kind historical Florida documents. Part of this tour includes a stop at Cocoa Village, an area on the water featuring seafood and other restaurants.

The Kennedy Space Center — A must-see Florida attraction, the Kennedy Space Center offers complete tours of its facilities and exhibits. The IMAX movies may be the best part as “one truly feels as if in space.”

Tour of Winter Park — This tour includes a stop at the Morse Museum of American Art which houses the Tiffany Collection and other American art. One can see Tiffany’s Electrochandeliers exhibited there. The Rollins College Campus and its Cornell Fine Arts Museum, Chapel and Theatre, are also featured on the tour as is a lovely boat excursion that cruises through area lakes and canals.

Tour of Southern College — Designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, the campus of Southern College is beautifully situated and a must for architecture buffs.

St. Johns River Tour — Explore the wonders of Florida wildlife from the ship which cruises through some still arms of the St. John’s River. A paradise for bird watchers, this is a narrated tour.
Confessions of an SAA Annual Meeting Assistant

by Shari Christy, National Aviation Hall of Fame

I have been an annual meeting assistant for the Society of American Archivists since 1994 and must confess that it continues to be among the most beneficial experiences I’ve had since joining the archival profession. All of the conferences have been filled with numerous networking and learning opportunities that have proven invaluable. It has allowed me to meet so many people from all walks of the archival profession that I might have not otherwise connected with.

Being an annual meeting assistant means you get to work closely with the wonderful SAA staff and helps you develop an appreciation for what goes into making an annual meeting great. SAA conferences begin on a Wednesday, with pre-conference workshops held during the three preceding days. However, the Saturday before is when the work begins for volunteers. This is when the souvenir bags for the more than 1,000 meeting attendees are stuffed with useful information: pocket programs, local restaurant guides and visitor brochures. There is also a “walk-through” of the hotel with hotel liaison staff so that a thorough lay of the land is acquired: from meeting space to ballrooms, business center, restaurants and other hotel facilities so that meeting attendees can be readily assisted.

Once the conference kicks-off, I am “on” as early as 6 a.m. and “off” sometimes as late as 11 p.m. depending on the day’s activities. During those hours I check every meeting room to verify that the room is set-up correctly and that all audiovisual equipment is in working order and turned on. I direct people to sessions, field queries, help attendees locate tours, and assist at banquets and receptions. I also stand ready to provide general assistance to SAA staff and the Host and Program Committees to resolve any challenges as they arise. In addition, I manage to attend sessions. You may have spotted me scurrying from place to place while sharing a rapid fire exchange via walkie-talkie.

The work is long and hard, make no mistake, but the tangible benefits and intangible rewards that I get every year that I attend an SAA annual meeting make it all worthwhile. The archival profession is so multi-faceted that it’s impossible to meet everyone, but by being an annual meeting assistant you get pretty close!

Opportunity Knocks: Annual Meeting Assistant Needed

The Society of American Archivists is seeking a member who would be willing to make a commitment to work at SAA’s next two annual meetings. The 1998 annual meeting will take place in Orlando, Florida, from August 31–September 6. The 1999 annual meeting will take place in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, from August 23–29. Candidates must have excellent communication and organizational skills, work well under pressure, and be willing to work long hours. The annual meeting assistant reports directly to SAA’s meeting director. Ground transportation, meals, hotel room, and registration fee are provided by SAA. Candidate pays for his or her own airfare. Please send a cover letter, resume, and three references by May 15, 1998, to Debra Mills, Meetings Consultant, Society of American Archivists 527 S. Wells St., 5th Floor, Chicago, IL 60607, fax (312) 347-1452.

Archival Outlook—March/April 1998
EAD 1.0 Is Here

The “Encoded Archival Description” (EAD) workshop has been completely revised and updated to reflect the new release of EAD (version 1.0). The workshop will teach participants how to encode their finding aids in Standard Generalized Markup Language (SGML) using Encoded Archival Description (EAD). EAD is becoming the standard Document Type Definition (DTD) for archival finding aids. Participants in this workshop will learn the structure of EAD, get an overview of SGML and its Web version, Extensible Markup Language (XML), learn how to use an SGML authoring program (Softquad’s Author/Editor), analyze what makes a good finding aid, and discuss implementation strategies, including the creation of new finding aids, conversion of legacy data, and publication on the Web. The workshop is very hands-on; basic computer skills are required. Participants will be able to apply the fundamental elements of EAD to finding aids at their own institution after taking the workshop.

Exciting Preconference Lineup for Orlando

I am happy to include a tentative list of workshops to be presented at the Preconference of SAA’s 62nd Annual Meeting in Orlando, Florida, August 31–Sept. 6, 1998. Of the nine workshops to be offered, five are new, with two offered in a “package” to participants who will receive a price discount if they sign up for both. The two-course package is “Basic Electronic Records” (August 31-September 1) and “Advanced Electronic Records” (September 2). The instructors for the electronic records workshops are outstanding teachers and experienced in the field. You will also find a new appraisal workshop, a new oral history course, and a new workshop on preservation microfilming. Many thanks to the Committee on Education and Professional Development who assisted me in reviewing the new workshop offerings.

We hope you will start early in making your plans for Orlando and we look forward to your making the preconference workshops part of your annual meeting schedule.

- Basic Electronic Records
  Instructor: Tom Ruller
  August 31 – September 1, 1998

- Advanced Electronic Records
  Design, Implementation and Evaluation
  Instructor: Anne Gilliland-Swetland
  September 2, 1998

- Grant Proposal Preparation
  Instructors: Richard Cameron and Laurie Baty
  August 31, 1998

- Preservation Microfilming Management
  Instructor: Erroll Somay
  August 31, 1998

- Encoded Archival Description (EAD)
  Instructors: Kris Kiesling and Michael Fox
  August 31 – September 1, 1998

- Preservation Management
  Instructors: Mary Lynn Ritzenhaler and Evelyn Frangakis
  August 31 – September 1, 1998

- Oral History: From Planning to Preservation
  Instructor: Fred Calabretta
  September 1, 1998

- Probing Appraisal Practice: Contending with Methods, Mayhem and Madness
  Instructor: Richard Cox
  September 1, 1998

- Understanding Archives: An Introduction to Principles and Practices
  Instructors: Julie Bressor and Polly Darnell
  September 1–2, 1998

Plans are Underway for Distance Learning!

Now that SAA’s foundation workshops are set through the 62nd annual meeting in Orlando, Florida, it has been possible for me to begin to plan for distance learning projects again. Certainly, videoconferencing and teleconferencing still seem to be the hot distance learning topics, but there is a viable alternative to them that SAA could develop quickly and cost-effectively. This is the option of on-line courses through our established Web site. Participants would be given a special password that would allow them to link to a detailed syllabus, reading requirements and methods of communicating with the instructor.

I am investigating the possibility of starting with basic electronic records training and hope to have at least one on-line course available by fall of 1998. This does not exclude the option of self-study packages; self-study packages may include e-mail and other computer-assisted instruction, but the initial “package” is a hard-copy syllabus and other support material mailed via the post office to each participant. The package often includes other support materials such as videocassettes, articles, exercise books and the like.

What is the purpose of distance learning? Two goals are of utmost importance:

1) to reach more of our members; and

2) to answer our members’ call for more affordable professional continuing education.

These barriers to participating in SAA’s education programs were noted last year after the needs assessment and, I wish to emphasize, not forgotten. I will keep you posted on progress with SAA’s plans for distance learning in future columns.
Encoded Archival Description
Workshop #9810
New York, New York
Co-sponsor: New York University
May 21-22, 1998 (registration deadline: April 22, 1998)
Fee : $342; SAA Members: $269
Continuing Education Units: 1.5
Instructors: Kris Kiesling and Michael J. Fox
Enrollment in this course is limited to 20 participants.
This workshop will teach participants how to encode their finding aids in Standard Generalized Markup Language (SGML) using Encoded Archival Description (EAD). EAD is becoming the standard Document Type Definition (DTD) for archival finding aids. Participants in this workshop will learn the structure of EAD, get an overview of SGML, learn how to use an SGML authoring program (Softquad’s Author/Editor), discuss what makes a good finding aid, and discuss implementation strategies. Participants will be able to apply the basic elements of EAD to finding aids at their own institution after completing the workshop.

Digital Imaging Technology
Workshop #9808
New Haven, Connecticut
Co-sponsor: New England Archivists
May 15, 1998 (registration deadline: April 15, 1998)
Fee: $235; SAA Members: $189
(Fee includes $20 for services and equipment)
Continuing Education Units: .75
Instructor: Paul Conway
This workshop will present the concepts and vocabulary of digital imaging technology and its application in the creation, storage, transmission, retrieval, display, and printing of images. The primary focus will be the use of this technology by archivists to create image databases of historically significant materials. Participants will complete advance reading assignments and should consider the use of digital imaging in their own repositories. The workshop will introduce components of imaging systems and their attendant costs, quality/production trade-offs, factors affecting the longevity of digital information, and access-related issues. Through lecture, discussion, case studies, exercises, and handouts, participants will gain an understanding of how the various approaches of digital imaging affect the capture of the range of paper and film-based materials found in archival collections.

Copyright and Fair Use for Archivists
Workshop #9806
Chicago, Illinois
Co-sponsor: Midwest Archives Conference (MAC)
April 29, 1998 (registration deadline: March 30, 1998)
Fee: $215; SAA Members: $169
Continuing Education Units: .75
Instructor: Peter Jaszi
This workshop will introduce some of the doctrines of U.S. copyright law which are most likely to impact archivists in their day-to-day activities. This includes: concepts of “copyrightability,” the work/object distinction; the status of unpublished works; fair use, and special exemptions; copyright law as applied to activities in the digital network environment; and an overview of the international copyright system as it may affect archival practice. A detailed discussion of actual problems and questions which participants in the workshop have encountered in their workplaces will be conducted. Specific legal advice will not be provided. The goal of the discussion will be to provide participants with a “toolkit” for analyzing copyright problems as they arise, and for working with their institution’s legal counsel to resolve them. Participants should come prepared to share their own experiences. The workshop will conclude with a summary of current copyright policy issues, including pending federal legislation on such topics as copyright term extension and copyright in the network environment.

Sound and Light: The Administration of Sound Recording and Moving Image Materials in Archives
Workshop #9807
New Orleans, Louisiana
Co-sponsor: Historic New Orleans Collection
May 7-8, 1998 (registration deadline: April 8, 1998)
Fee: $342; SAA Members: $269
Continuing Education Units: 1.5
Instructors: Chris Paton, Barbara Sawka, Maxine Fleckner Ducey
This course will present the history of recording formats; types of recorded media and technology used, from cylinder recordings through film and videotape; aging and deterioration characteristics of each medium; methods for extending the life of non-archival formats, including proper storage and handling of the materials; and the types of equipment required for staff and patron use of audiovisual recordings. Sound and moving image records are among the most challenging formats found in twentieth century archival collections; these recordings contain irreplaceable information, yet are inherently unstable formats.

Archives in Cyberspace: Applying Techniques to Improve the Business of Archives
Workshop #9809
Pocatello, Idaho
Co-sponsor: Conference of Inter-Mountain Archivists (CIMA)
May 20, 1998 (registration deadline: April 20, 1998)
Fee: $215; SAA Members: $169
Continuing Education Units: .75
Instructor: Tom Ruller
Enrollment in this course is limited to 20 participants.
This workshop will teach archivists how to deliver quality services to their customers via the Internet. Topics include remote reference services, online finding aids, and effective presentation of information for remote users. Participants will learn techniques for identifying customers for network service delivery, preparing materials for online dissemination, and requirements for managing, operating, and maintaining quality Internet services. The workshop builds on the introduction to the Internet provided by the SAA workshop Cyberspace for Archivists and assumes a basic knowledge of the Internet and Internet-based applications like the World Wide Web.

WILLIAM D. CAUGHLIN recently became manager of corporate archives at Ameritech Corp., the communications company based in Chicago. He was previously an employee of The Winthrop Group, Inc., first serving as project archivist at Kraft Foods, Inc. and then as the on-site archivist for Ameritech.

DAVID DE LORENZO has been named the France-Merrick director of the library at the Maryland Historical Society. Formerly, he held the position of curator of manuscripts and archives at Harvard Law School.

FYNNETTE EATON, who served as chief of the Technical Services Branch of the Center for Electronic Records at NARA, has joined the Office of Smithsonian Institution Archives to develop an electronic records program for the Smithsonian Institution.

BILL HANNA has returned to the Mississippi Department of Archives and History to serve as director of the Local Government Records Office. Hanna began working for the department in 1974, serving as the director of the Records Management Division from 1987 to 1993. He was records manager for the City of Jackson from 1993 to 1997.

HERBERT J. HARTSOOK, curator of modern political collections at the University of South Carolina’s South Caroliniana Library, has contributed a chapter titled “Unique Resources: Research in Archival Collections,” to Writing Educational Biography, Explorations In Qualitative Research (Garland Publishing, Inc).

HEATHER HEYWOOD, formerly of the World Bank Group Archives, is now working in the archives for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva, Switzerland.

MARILYN PAUL-LEWIS has been appointed as the 1997-1998 NHPRC Fellow at the Thomas J. Dodd Research Center at the University of Connecticut. Prior to her appointment she was the traveling archivist for the Association of Newfoundland and Labrador Archives.

BETSY PITTMAN was recently appointed as university archivist at the Thomas J. Dodd Research Center at the University of Connecticut. Pittman was formerly university archivist and head of special collections at the Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Virginia.

BARBARA TRIPPEL SIMMONS joined the staff of the Amherst College Archives and Special Collections last September as processing archivist.

In 1985, the Society of American Archivists awarded AIP its Distinguished Service Award for outstanding contributions to the archival profession. That same year, Joan co-authored Appraising the Records of Modern Science and Technology: A Guide (MIT, 1985), which is still available from SAA.

Another component of Joan’s responsibility was the International Catalog of Sources for History of Physics and Allied Sciences. Joan’s major innovation was to persuade institutions outside the United States to conduct surveys to locate relevant collections in their countries and share the information in the catalog.

A friendly understanding between archivists and scientists was one of Joan’s deeply felt goals. She promoted the idea that strong professional archival skills are more essential for those working with papers of scientists than a background in science itself.

Although Joan took up retirement last August, she was immediately rehired by AIP on a part-time basis as archivist emeritus, serving as a valued adviser to staff, and continues as project director of the grant-funded AIP Study of Multi-Institutional Collaborations. On completion of the collaborations study in 1998 Joan will go into retirement full-time (in North Carolina) with her husband, the eminent accelerator physicist John Blewett.
Obituaries

MARGARET STORRS GRIERSON, 97, longtime archivist at Smith College, died on December 12, 1997, in Northampton, Massachusetts. Born June 29, 1900, in Denver, Colorado, Grierson was the daughter of the late Lucius Seymour and Mary Cooper Storrs. She graduated from Smith College in 1922, and taught philosophy at Bryn Mawr College while studying for a Ph.D. After completing her degree, she returned to Smith in 1930, teaching philosophy for a number of years before being named college archivist in 1940 and, in 1942, executive secretary of the Friends of the Library and director of the new Sophia Smith Collection.

During her tenure working with Mary R. Beard, an early champion of women's history, Grierson was responsible for transforming the collection from its beginnings as a repository of works by women writers into an internationally prominent historical research collection. Today its holdings—5,500 linear feet in volume—document the historical experience of women in the United States and abroad from the colonial era to the present. Its subject strengths include birth control, women's rights, suffrage, the contemporary women's movement, U.S. women working abroad, the arts, the professions, and middle-class family life in nineteenth- and twentieth-century New England.

Grierson was several decades ahead of her time when the Sophia Smith Collections was founded. When the women's liberation movement brought a renewed interest in women's history, the collection was beautifully positioned to supply scholars and the media with the sources they needed to begin augmenting the historical record. Grierson is one of the unsung giants who made the field of women's history possible.

Devoted to the preservation of the college's history, Grierson simultaneously built a college archives with a uniquely rich collection of student letters, diaries, scrapbooks, and photographs.

A memorial service will be held at 2 P.M. on Saturday, May 9, 1998, in the Helen Hills Chapel at Smith College. Contributions in Grierson's memory can be made to the Margaret Storrs Grierson Endowment Fund for the Sophia Smith Collection and Smith College Archives.

SHERRELL REDMAN

It was with sadness that I learned of the death of MARGERY S. LONG, M.L.S. on December 19, 1997. Margery was audio-visual curator of the Walter P. Reuther Library at Wayne State University in Detroit. Her career at Wayne spanned almost a quarter century. She manifested a serious interest in visual materials, preservation, sound recordings, and archival exhibitions, all of which had been neglected areas among archivists. Here research, teaching, and professional involvement in these overlooked aspects of archival administration served to draw attention to them, helping to raise consciousness and appreciation for their value to the profession. She co-authored "Archives and Manuscripts: Administration of Photographic Collections" a basic text in this realm, published and reprinted by the Society of American Archivists as a testimony to its worth.

For many years Margery taught the graduate-level course Conservation and Administration of Photograph Collections as part of the Archival Administration program at Wayne, developed by the distinguished archivist and historian Philip P. Mason. As a student, this course was a major factor in my decision to concentrate in the visual materials aspect of archival administration. I can testify to Margery’s inspirational qualities as an instructor. She offered workshops under the auspices of SAA as well, sharing here expertise with a broader professional audience.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of Margery’s career was her extensive work with exhibitions of documents and photographs. Such time consuming and labor intensive efforts are often underrated by those who lack appreciation for what such projects involve. Exhibitions make a strong impact on viewers, and are often on the cutting edge of research. Unless a full catalog is produced, exhibits leave no permanent record behind, making them more difficult to judge as professional achievements. Margery’s exhibitions at the Reuther Library, as well as permanent installations at off-site locations, are a credit to her and to Wayne State University. During my graduate years I served as her research assistant for the exhibition The Wobblies (nicknamed for a member of the Industrial Workers of the World union), an experience that influenced my subsequent work in the exhibition field.

Margery was a long record of excellent service and outstanding professional contributions. As one of her students, a colleague, and a former chair of the SAA Visual Materials Section, I know I speak for man, when I say “Margery, we will miss you greatly.”

Good News for Archivists in the President's Budget

I am enormously pleased to be able to report to the archival community that President Clinton’s budget for Fiscal Year 1999 includes a big increase for the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) and an increase as well for grants from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC).

If Congress approves the president’s budget, NARA will receive significantly increased funds to:

- expand public access to the nation’s records;
- develop solutions to the problems of managing and preserving electronic records;
- help federal agencies manage their records more efficiently for use in their current operations and ensure preservation for the future;
- preserve valuable historical records that are already at risk;
- make repairs in our facilities; and
- ensure the preservation of the Charters of Freedom.

The president proposes to increase NARA’s operating budget from $205,166,500 to $230,025,000, an increase of $24,858,500, which is 12.1 percent. The budget proposal also includes $10,450,000 for repairs and restorations at NARA facilities, re-encasement of the Charters of Freedom to ensure their preservation, and a concept design for the renovation of Archives I. And the proposal would increase funds for grants from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission by one-half million dollars, 9.1 percent. The NHPRC budget would rise from $5.5 million to $6 million, which is the most that the NHPRC has ever received for competitive grants.

The proposed budget increase relates to many goals in NARA’s strategic plan. The proposed increase would help us improve guidance to agencies on front-end records management by enabling us to increase staff for that purpose, establish an information baseline on agency problems and practices, and undertake business process re-engineering to set the stage for development of the portion of a records life-cycle information system in which front-end records management would be automated. The proposed increase would help us deal more effectively with electronic records by enabling us to accelerate work on the development of standards and tools for electronic records management, help develop our own preservation infrastructure for electronic records, and increase our capacity to provide public access to electronic records. The proposed increase would help us increase access to records by enabling us to expedite the declassification of records through a records-scanning project, upgrade the electronic foundation for our delivery of information internally and to customers, and modernize and upgrade NARA’s research room equipment. For example, we would begin replacing broken, deteriorating, and inadequate equipment, such as microfilm readers and audio and video players, and we would place research computer terminals in archival facilities and presidential libraries so that researchers could access at our sites the same information that we make electronically accessible at home. The proposed increase also would help us meet preservation goals by enabling us to deal with critical problems in preserving veterans’ records, and to convert aging motion-picture, audio, and still-photo collections from deteriorating and obsolete formats.

The proposal would protect our base budget, including current salaries and pay raises projected for fiscal year 1999, and provide funds for the replacement of our current personnel and payroll processing systems, as well as for increases in rent and facility charges. The proposed budget would help us fill out our staffing plan in some priority areas. Also of great importance for our future progress, the budget would give us both authority and money to plan a “reimbursable” program, through which we would be able to charge agencies for records storage and retrieval services more widely than our records centers do now. Also, the increased funds for NHPRC would make more grant funds available for archival projects outside the federal government, including electronic records research and development.

Clearly the president has understood the importance of managing the nation’s records well, preserving them, and making them readily accessible—records in electronic as well as in traditional forms. The president is acting dramatically to ensure our progress. We are grateful to him, as everyone will be who cares about our nation’s records. The budget represents a tremendous step forward. I now will be working as hard as I can to seek its approval by Congress.

Don’t take a chance with your paper valuables!

Preserve them in

Mylar® Docu-Gard™ Sleeves

from BCE, the Preservation Professionals™

Why Mylar® Type D?

Mylar® D is the uncoated archival quality polyester film that is the most stable and inert of all known plastic films. It contains no volatile chemicals that can migrate to the paper and cause damage. It is resistant to almost all outside influences and will remain unchanged for over two hundred years. In addition, it is an effective barrier to acidity, the primary cause of paper deterioration.

Why Bill Cole Enterprises?

With over twenty years experience in the preservation field, BCE is a major supplier to The Library of Congress and The National Archives for their preservation sleeves. All materials are in stock for immediate delivery, and special sizes can be quoted over the phone using our new service “INSTA-QUOTE™.” We have toll free phone and fax numbers for your convenience and Internet access as well.

Why INSTA-QUOTE™?

INSTA-QUOTE™ is our latest technology to give you immediate quotations for all your Mylar® needs while you are on the phone. Just by a click of a button, we can give you an immediate quote on rolls, sheets or sleeves. You no longer have to wait hours, days or weeks. This is an exclusive service from Bill Cole Enterprises!

President Recommends a Budget Increase for National Archives—The numbers in the president’s FY’99 budget requests to Congress became public on February 2. President Clinton has requested $230 million, a $24.8 million increase, for the National Archives’ operating budget. If approved by Congress, this 12.1 percent increase would greatly assist the National Archives in expanding access to its records and developing solutions to the problems of managing and preserving the nation’s electronic records.

In addition to the operating budget for the National Archives, the president requested $10.45 million for a separate line item for repairs and restorations. This amount is divided into three categories: $4 million is earmarked for ensuring the preservation of the nation’s Charters of Freedom—the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights; $4.45 million will go for repairs at the National Archives’ many buildings, which include the presidential libraries, regional archives, and records centers; and $2 million will be used for an architectural and engineering study for the renovation of the Archives I, the National Archives’ building on Pennsylvania Avenue.

President’s FY’99 Request for NHPRC is $6 Million—The president has requested an FY’99 budget for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC) of $6 million. Last year the president requested only $4 million of NHPRC; however, Congress appropriated $5.5 million. If NHPRC receives $6 million in FY’99 this would be a 9.1 percent increase over the current level and would be the most that NHPRC has ever received for competitive grants.

Steering Committee of the Conference on Fair Use Recommends Focusing on Copyright Awareness and Educational Licensing—The Steering Committee for the Conference on Fair Use (CONFU) held a meeting in December to review developments that have occurred since the May 1997 plenary meeting and the release of the “The Report to the Commissioner.” The report, which was developed by organizations in both the copyright owner and user communities, contained the draft proposals for fair use guidelines in the areas of digital images, distance learning, and educational multimedia.

The Steering Committee concluded that although CONFU had not been successful in developing guidelines for educational and library use that had wide-spread support; the CONFU process had resulted in a very useful and stimulating national debate on copyright and had facilitated new alliances and cooperative ventures.

The Steering Committee applauded the fact that many organizations that participated in the CONFU meetings have conducted copyright awareness programs for their members, drafted articles and reports, presented lectures, and hosted discussion group meetings, round tables, seminars, and panels that have focused on the copyright law and the issues involved in applying fair use to the digital age. The Steering Committee members also noted increased activity as a result of the CONFU discussions in the development of educational site licensing projects and programs that facilitate using copyrighted material to meet specific educational needs.

The Steering Committee has proposed that the final meeting of CONFU, which will be held on May 18, focus some time on copyright awareness efforts and educational licensing projects. The intent of the final meeting is not to produce formal policies and procedures but to provide a forum for discussions of critical issues among the parties with a vested interest in the application of the copyright law to the digital environment.

Date Set for National Archives’ House Appropriations Hearing—Representative Jim Kolbe (R-AZ), the chair of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government, has scheduled a hearing for the afternoon of March 26 to hear from U.S. Archivist John Carlin concerning the FY’99 budget for the National Archives and the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. The administration’s request for the archives and NHPRC was not made public until February 2, following the president’s presentation of the FY’99 budget to Congress.

The House Appropriations Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government has decided not to hold a hearing this year for outside witnesses to testify concerning the FY’99 appropriations of agencies under its jurisdiction. However, there will be an opportunity to submit written testimony. This will be the first time in over a decade that this House Subcommittee has not provided citizens and interested organizations with an occasion to testify at a hearing.

Judge Instructs National Archives to Reappraise Contested Okinawa Films—On February 2, Judge T. S. Ellis, III, of the United States District Court For the Eastern District of Virginia, ruled in the case of Seiko Green v. The National Archives (C.A. No. 97-0146-A) that the National Archives’ decision to dispose of Okinawa Films “was based on erroneous factual premise.” Since the National Archives’ conclusion that the films lack sufficient value to warrant continued preservation was “unreliable,” the decision calls upon the National Archives to “set aside” their previous appraisal decision.

In this case Seiko Green, a historical researcher was researching films obtained through a FOIA request on the U.S. occupation of Okinawa when the National Archives informed her that the records were being packed to give to the Okinawa Prefectural Archives. This collection consists of approximately 2,185 16-mm films contained in 55 boxes. The archives’ decision to dispose of the records was based on an understanding that these films are for the period 1944–1961. Plaintiff Green contended that virtually all of the films are from the period 1960–1972. The National Archives claimed that the films simply depict local life on Okinawa and its neighboring islands, but the plaintiff argues that many of the films chronicle United States military and diplomatic activities, including chemical weapons operations, trials of political activists, and the United States Army's control of a civil government and economy in an occupied territory for two decades. Green said there are no duplicate films. The National Archives claimed that the decision was “based on the considered judgment of the Archives’ professional staff.” However, Judge Ellis did not find the National Archives' attempts to “harmonize” the appraisal archivist’s affidavit with the deposition testimony persuasive.

The judge stressed that this opinion does not include any view on whether the Okinawa film collection should be retained by the National Archives. He said that the final disposal decision would be “committed to NARA's sound discretion.” Archivist John Carlin has committed the National Archives to a full reappraisal of the value of the Okinawa films. Carlin said: “We will respect the court’s opinion by giving them a fresh evaluation.”

FY’99 Budget for NEH—The administration’s FY’99 budget request of $136 million for the National Endowment for the Humanities includes: $100.2 million for national grant programs in support of high quality education, research, preservation, and public projects; $5 million for start-up funds to support the new multi-year special initiative titled “Rediscovering America: The Humanities and the Millennium;” $10 million for NEH Challenge Grants to stimulate and match private, non-federal donations in support of humanities institutions and organizations; $4 million to stimulate and match non-federal contributions to humanities projects; and $16.8 million for administrative expenses.

The $100.2 million for NEH’s ongoing national grants programs has four line items: $35.6 million for the State Humanities Councils; $20 million for the Preservation and Access Program; $16.2 million for Public and Enterprise Program; and $28.4 million for the Research and Education Program. Although “Rediscovering America: The Humanities and the Millennium” has featured the establishment of regional humanities centers around the country, there are a number of other components to this new initiative. Of particular note are the “Schools for a New Millennium” project which will help schools and teachers incorporate new information technologies into their classrooms. Other projects include a special emphasis in NEH’s Preservation and Access division in support of projects to digitize important materials held by the nation’s museums, libraries, archives, and historical organizations.
As the manager of a small community college archives, I am always looking for ways to fund projects, or to simply find money to purchase much needed supplies. In this climate of shrinking budgets, it is more important than ever to find additional sources of funding. In this article, I will share with you some of the techniques that I have used to find funding for my archives.

When I came to LaGuardia Community College in September of 1996, the college was just beginning a year long 25th anniversary celebration. Although I did not know it at the time, this proved to be a fortunate event for the archives. I knew that from the start the institutional archives would be the place where people came to learn about the history of the college. I quickly discovered just how unprepared the archives was to respond to the needs of the college community. Photographs depicting 25 years of events and people were haphazardly stored in an old box. There were no finding aids. We did not even have exhibit formats photograph displays. Worst of all, I did not have any money to hire a part-time worker to assist with processing or to purchase additional supplies.

After reviewing my options, I decided that my first order of business was to hire a part-time employee to assist with clearing up the backlog of processing. I asked myself, with no money to spare, how could I hire the help that I needed? As it turned out, the answer was all around me. Students! I went to the coordinator of the student work-study program and asked her if there was anything she could do to help me out. She told me about the Federal Work-Study Program. This unique program pays the salaries of students who work on campus. There is no cost to either the archives or the library department. Several weeks later, I was training a student to handle some of the more routine tasks in the archives. This student proved to be a valuable asset during a very busy period for the archives. I recommend that you inquire about this program at your college. It will save you money while at the same time provide you with additional staff.

My second order of business was to purchase exhibit mats so that I could host photograph displays during the course of the anniversary celebration. Once again, money was a problem. My solution was to apply for a professional development grant. This grant is offered by my college to faculty and staff to aid them in developing and implementing projects that will improve some aspect of college life. In my case, I hosted a photograph exhibit that highlighted cultural and social events held at the college during its first quarter century. I received a total of $300, which was more than enough to purchase necessary supplies. This grant program is an alternative source of funding that is worth investigating. Perhaps your institution offers a similar grant.

Among my various responsibilities is that of preserving the materials of the institutional archives. In this regard, I decided that we needed to have a general preservation survey of the entire collection to determine present and future preservation needs. As many of you already know, such a survey usually costs around $2,500. Once again, this is money that I simply did not have in my budget. Fortunately, I learned through professional contacts about a grant that pays for preservation surveys. It is called “The New York State Program for the Conservation and Preservation of Library Research Materials.” This grant pays for the full cost of the survey.

The news gets better. As I began to search for qualified preservation professionals to perform the survey, I learned that both the Conservation Center in Philadelphia and the Northeast Document Conservation Center (NEDCC) in Andover, MA, could do the survey for as little as $300 plus expenses. The reason? Both organizations received funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities that allows them to offer this service at a greatly reduced price. When all was said and done, I paid approximately $435 for the preservation survey. And I was able to obtain money from my college. As a result, I rewrote my grant proposal and if approved, I will use the money to purchase environmental monitoring equipment for the archives.

Another avenue of funding is the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), Division of Preservation and Access. This program supports a variety of preservation activities, from the conservation of paper materials, to educational and training programs. Any U.S., nonprofit tax-exempt organization or institution is eligible to apply for a grant. What follows is a listing of the types of projects supported by the NEH and a brief description of each.

Preservation Microfilming: The focus of this program element is the preservation of brittle books and serials. Grant amounts vary widely and will not exceed 67 percent of a project’s total cost.

United States Newspaper Program: This program was started to specifically locate, catalog, and preserve on microfilm newspapers from around the country. Awards have reached up to $1 million for projects up to three years in duration. Grants can be obtained for up to 80 percent of planning and cataloging costs and up to 67 percent of the total microfilming expenses.

Special Collections: The NEH provides funding for projects that involve access to and preservation of special collections. This includes arrangement, description and preservation of archival and manuscript collections, bibliographic control of printed materials and the cataloging and preservation of still and moving images, as well as recorded sound collections. An organization receiving this grant is expected to contribute 50 percent of the projects’ cost.

National Heritage Preservation Program: This program provides grant money to institutions holding significant collections of archaeological and ethnographic objects, decorative arts, textiles and historical artifacts. Funding can be obtained for stabilization projects, the purchase of storage furniture, the improvement of environmental conditions and the installation of security, lighting and fire-prevention systems. NEH funding will not exceed 50 percent of a project’s total costs.
Education and Training: Grant money can be obtained for education and training programs that focus on the care of archival and library materials. NEH will contribute up to 80 percent towards the costs of such programs.

Research Tools and Reference Works: Grant funding is available for projects to create databases, bibliographies and other research tools and reference works that are of significant importance to the humanities. NEH’s contribution to such projects will not exceed 67 percent.

For more detailed information about the NEH preservation and access grants, contact: Division of Preservation and Access, National Endowment for the Humanities, 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Room 411, Washington, DC 20506. Or visit the NEH Web site at: www.neh.gov.

The job of managing even a small college archives is not an easy task. Budgets have been reduced over the past decade making it more difficult to purchase even basic supplies and services. As a result, we must all make a special effort to explore alternative sources of funding, both from within our institutions and from without.

SAA and Scarecrow Press, Inc. (1994), 208 pp., hard cover $46.50 SAA members $41.50 plus $6.75 for shipping and handling.

Sharpen Your Skills

As institutional budgets become tighter and information sources wider and more complex, archivists, manuscript curators, and staff of special collections seek ways to broaden the use of their materials, bringing their services and their story to various publics. This manual presents practical advice on how to find and relate to these publics: how to better serve the client in person, launch a fund-raising campaign, work with media, market programs, organize programs around historical events, train and successfully use volunteers, and avoid the commonest public relations errors by planning. This book aims to make public relations skills an integral part of archival management.
On the Move

- Archivists for Congregations of Women Religious (ACWR) relocated its national office in fall 1997 to Trinity College, Washington, D.C. ACWR feels privileged to be associated with this women’s college, which is celebrating one hundred years of fidelity to its mission of educating women for leadership. Please call or write: ACWR National Office, Trinity College, 125 Michigan Ave. NE, Washington, D.C. 20017, (202) 884-9441.

- South Carolina Department of Archives and History will close to the public on April 19, 1998, and begin packing more than 330 years of state history for the trip to its new home, the South Carolina History Center, nine miles away. The move to a multi-use research and education facility located at 8301 Parklane Road in Columbia will be completed on May 5, 1998.

- City of Philadelphia Department of Records is pleased to announce that it has selected a new facility for the Philadelphia City Archives and Records Center. After a citywide search for suitable space in which to house critical government and public service functions, the department has selected the former Bulletin Building at 3101 Market Street. The scheduled occupancy is for July 1998.

Gift Celebrates the Contribution of American Archivists

The National Film Preservation Foundation (NFPF) has received an anonymous gift of $25,000, donated in the name of the Association of Moving Image Archivists (AMIA). NFPF was created by Congress in 1996 to raise private funds to help American archives preserve films and make them publicly available. It is the charitable affiliate of the Library of Congress’s National Film Preservation Board. The foundation concentrates on saving films not preserved by commercial interests. The gift celebrates the support of AMIA for the new federally chartered foundation and the preservation work of its members.

Dodd Research Center Snags SNET Collections

Connecticut’s largest telecommunications company—SNET—and its only public research university—the University of Connecticut (UConn)—recently entered into a formal, continuing partnership to create a special collection of SNET historical documents and photographs at UConn’s Thomas J. Dodd Research Center in Storrs. According to Thomas P. Wilsted, director of the Dodd Center and an SAA member, the SNET Collection, when all material has been transferred, will weigh more than 17 tons and total approximately 2.5 million documents and become the second largest private collection at the center.

With significant financial support from SNET, UConn will arrange, describe, and catalog the collection, as well as create oral histories. Plans call for putting a portion of the collection onto UConn’s Web site at www.lib.uconn.edu/DoddCenter/ASC/SNET/snemain.html with a link to SNET’s Web site at www.snet.com.

YIVO Archives Publication

The YIVO Institute for Jewish Research announces the availability of the Guide to the YIVO Archives, compiled and edited by Fruma Mohrer and Marek Web (M.E. Sharpe, 1997). The book provides collection level information to over 1,000 collections and has a 75-page index offering quick access to a broad range of subjects. The archives houses 22 million original documents on Jewish life around the world concentrating on Yiddish language and culture, European history with emphasis on the history of East European Jews and their descendants, American Jewish history with emphasis on immigration, and the Holocaust. Available directly from the publisher at $125, the book is being offered for a limited time only at a special discount price of $70 plus shipping. Contact: Fruma Mohrer at (212) 246-6080 or fax (212) 292-1892.
France's Dreyfus Affair

In January, the Bibliothèque Nationale de France joined with other French cultural heritage organizations to commemorate the centennial of novelist Émile Zola's famous open letter to the President of the Republic protesting continued imprisonment of Captain Alfred Dreyfus on charges of treason. Zola “J'accuse” letter appeared in the January 13, 1898 edition of L'Aurore and stirred popular support for reopening the Dreyfus case and ultimate acquittal of Dreyfus. Zola's involvement in the Dreyfus affair set the stage for political engagement of future generations of French intellectuals. The Bibliothèque Nationale's program of commemoration included an exhibit of documents relating to the Dreyfus case, a day-long symposium on "Zola and the Dreyfus Affair," the placing of a plaque on the house in the rue de Bruxelles where Zola wrote his letter, and a wreath laying ceremony at the Pantheon.

History of Social Security in Netherlands

The Netherlands Economic History Archive (NEHA) and the International Institute of Social History (IISH), both of Amsterdam, have begun work on a general history of social security in the Netherlands from 1500 to present. The project is supported by the Dutch Union of Insurers and will document a variety of historical arrangements to insure security of people in Holland, such as philanthropy, poor relief and charities, commercial insurance, mutual aid by guilds and worker societies, union provisions, national insurance, etc. NEHA was established in 1914 to facilitate collection, preservation and processing of source materials for economic history. NEHA conducts the Business Archives Registers, a reference service for information on the location and availability of company archives. IISH was established in 1935 as a documentary research center in the field of social history in general and labor history in particular.

Mayibuye Center for History and Culture in South Africa

The Mayibuye Center for History and Culture in South Africa, located at the University of the Western Cape, has produced a series of CD-ROM productions on “Apartheid and the History of the Struggle for Freedom in South Africa.” The series is comprised of textual information, photographic images, audio and video clips. The Mayibuye Center was established in 1992. The word "mayibuye" means “let it return” in the Xhosa and Zulu languages. The purpose of the center is to recover neglected aspects of South African history and create space for cultural creativity and expression in a way that encourages the process of reconstruction in South Africa. To learn more about the center or to order a CD-ROM, visit the Web site at www.apartheid.co.za/mayib.shtml.

University of Maryland’s China Archives Project

The University of Maryland’s China Archives Project hosted the Third International Conference on Local Chinese Archives in November 1997. The conference was held at Archives II in College Park, Maryland, and was sponsored by the university’s China Committee, in cooperation with the U.S. National Archives and the Central Archives and State Archives Bureau of the People’s Republic of China. The university’s history department, College of Arts and Humanities, College of Library and Information Services, Institute for Global Chinese Affairs, and the United Board of Christian Higher Education in Asia also participated in developing the conference. Sixteen archivists from China attended. Besides hosting annual conferences, the university’s China Archives Project funds a number of training programs for Chinese archivists and promotes the use of local and national archives in China by American scholars. For more information, contact Dr. Shu Guang Zhang of the University of Maryland's history department at (301) 405-7773.

British Secret Service Records

MI5, the British Secret Service, has released to the English Public Record Office a series of records covering the period from its formation in 1909 to the end of World War I. This material consists mainly of a set of reports commissioned in 1916 by the Committee on Imperial Defense concerning MIS's own activities immediately prior to and during the course of the war. The reports cover the service’s systems of operation, the authority under which it acted, its coordination with other agencies, and faults to be rectified. Also released were the War Office file of Vernon Kell, which argued the case for a secret service bureau in 1908 as well as Kell’s official diary, 1910-1911, and his six monthly reports to the War Office.

International Federation of Television Archives

More than 180 delegates attended the International Federation of Television Archives (FIAT) annual conference in Budapest, Hungary, last September. The theme of the conference was “Television Archives: Between Cultural Heritage and Profit Centers.” Sponsored by MTV, the Hungarian state broadcasting corporation, the conference featured open meetings of commissions, sessions exploring the conference theme, workshops, and an awards ceremony. Liisa Akimof from Yleisradio Oy, Finland, was the recipient of the 1997 FIAT Television Archive Award for her production of Pere Lachaise—Necropolis. FIAT’s 1998 conference will be held in Florence, Italy.
A congenial and intellectually curious group of archivists and related professionals gathered in San Francisco on October 17, 1997, for briefing on China before an afternoon flight for Beijing. Arriving in Beijing on a weekend gave us a chance to recover from jet lag and begin our adventure with sightseeing, not professional visits, on our first day. A good night's rest and warm, sunny weather made for a wonderful beginning to our trip. The Sacred Way esplanade at the Ming Tombs lined with ancient stone mythical camels, elephants and other animals and figures was the first stop before heading to China's most famous tourist destination—the Great Wall. It was an excellent initiation to Chinese civilization.

Monday we began our first of eleven professional visits in three of China’s major cities: Beijing, Nanjing and Shanghai. For me this journey was a second trip to these cities and to many of the sites of our professional visits. In 1986 I chaired a delegation sponsored by the Society of American Archivists that spent nearly a month visiting China even more extensively. The changes since 1986 both in the country and in the archives were dramatic. In general, there were major improvements. Certainly the ease and comfort of travel was an obvious one with first rate hotels, meals and transportation this time around.

One of the most dramatic single changes for me, symbolizing what has taken place in the past eleven years, was the Shanghai Museum. In 1986 it was housed in a dingy, run-down building with old fashioned displays and a museum shop that was not open during our group’s visit. This time we toured the new museum and found a place of superb design and incomparable beauty. The building is fabulous and the display of the stunning collection of Chinese art and cultural artifacts is done with the most modern technology and sophistication. Visitors receive an electronic “wand” with a panel of numbers allowing the visitor to enter the number of each exhibit and receive a perfect English language description. The viewer determines how much or how little information to receive on the art piece or artifact. Reflecting the new commercialism of China, not only was the large and very handsome main museum store open, but each floor had its own museum shop to attract funds from visitors.

Our initial professional visit was at the first of three universities visited. This was the archives college of the People’s University in Beijing, occupying a modern building with an extensive faculty and about 300 students. Archival education is basically an undergraduate program in China, but this oldest and most developed program offered advanced degrees including the only archival Ph.D. program in China. Discussions with the faculty were interesting, as was the tour of their facilities. Clearly preservation technology and research was an important part of their curriculum evidenced by the very advanced machines for testing paper strength and accelerated aging of documents. In addition there were laboratories where traditional practices of repair and restoration of documents were demonstrated. These practices are very labor intensive but that did not seem to be a problem for the Chinese.

At the Shanghai University we visited the archives department of the Liberal Arts college, a smaller, strictly undergraduate program.

The third university visited was Nanjing University, one of China’s oldest and most distinguished universities where our focus was on the Library School. Here we had the opportunity to have personal encounters with a group of very bright, English-speaking students who showed great knowledge of our computer-oriented systems and left our group impressed with the quality of the students and the up-to-dateness of their program.

We also toured the University Library at Nanjing. Our first library visit had been a brief stop at the National Library in Beijing and our last library, clearly the most advanced, was the Shanghai Public Library, a spectacular modern facility with much automation including use of OCLC, the internet and an automated book delivery system.

Our third group of institutions visited were the archives themselves. Two were national archives, the First Historical Archives in Beijing and the Second Historical Archives in Nanjing. The other two were municipal archives in Beijing and Shanghai. I had visited both of the historical archives in 1986 and found them still in their same quarters. We were received with great friendliness in both places, facilitated in part by officials I knew from my previous connections with Chinese archives. Our discussions were open and far ranging. There was great interest in the handling of electronic records, perhaps fostered by the fact that a member of our delegation was Microsoft’s archivist. Funding for these archives seemed good since we did not hear stories of horrendous funding problems as we did on our visit to Russian archives in 1995. The Second Historical Archives did run an extensive gift shop, which our hosts explained provided funds to supplement its budget. While in Beijing we also held a discussion session with representatives of the State Archives Bureau, which oversees the First and Second Historical Archives and all other Chinese archives to a greater or lesser degree.

Visits and staff meetings with the Beijing and Shanghai Municipal Archives rounded out our professional visits. In my case, the Shanghai archives was a second visit. Gone this time from that archives was its antiquated building with its hand-made wooden shelving. In its place was a well-equipped, modern archives facility—compact steel shelving, temperature and humidity control, preservation laboratories. Beijing's municipal archives was even newer, opening in 1995 in its own fifteen-story (with two more underground) building. They are using the computer for finding aids and exploring the possibility of full text delivery of materials.

There is nothing quite comparable in size, quality, and scope in U.S. cities to these archival agencies. Not only do they collect records of the government affairs of these two cities but also what we would think of as the private side of their development—church records, collections of personal papers, business records. In Shanghai of special interest were records of the old foreign concessions taken over by revolutionary government in 1949.

Clearly archives are given high priority by the government of China. They are well supported with well trained staffs. They are the first to admit that they look to America for leadership in the emerging field of archiving electronic records. But they recognize the challenges posed by these new records, are anxious for professional exchanges to help them meet them and are making rapid progress in archives in the meantime.

A significant omission from our itinerary was the Central Archive in Beijing which houses the records of the government since the Communist revolution. And in our discussions there was little mention of access problems of contemporary records. By contrast, records of the Soviet Union were a star attraction on our 1995 Moscow and St. Petersburg trip and access issues were subjects of lively, sometimes heated, debate.

In addition to these generally excellent professional visits, there was lots of time for sightseeing, cultural activities, and shopping. The People-to-People Program, which sponsored this archival tour, made excellent arrangements for us and will soon publish a more detailed summary of the trip.

The Chinese had erected large, colorful billboards throughout the cities that read: VISIT CHINA IN ’97. We were glad we did!

FELLOWSHIPS & GRANTS

Midwest Archives Conference Scholarship
The Midwest Archives Conference (MAC) is soliciting applications for the annual MAC Scholarship for Minority Students in Archival Administration. The scholarship is designed to provide financial assistance to minority students pursuing graduate education in archival administration and encourage ethnic diversification of the membership of the Midwest Archives Conference and of the archival profession as a whole. This year, two $500 scholarships will be awarded. In order to be eligible for a scholarship, the applicant must be a student of African, Asian, Hispanic, native American, or Pacific Islander descent, currently enrolled in, or accepted into, a graduate, multi-course program in archival administration listed in the SAA Directory of Archival Education, and must have a grade point average of at least 3.0 (on a 4.0 scale) in their academic program. Applicants are not required to be a resident of or attend school in the Midwest region. Applications are available from the Minority Scholarship Committee chair: Michael Flug, Archivist, Vivian G. Harsh Research Collection of Afro-American History & Literature, 9525 South Halsted Street, Chicago, IL 60628, (312) 747-6910. Applications must be postmarked by April 1, 1998. Awards will be announced no later than June 1, 1998.

AIP Center for History of Physics Announces New Grants to Archives
The Center for History of Physics of the American Institute of Physics is pleased to announce a new program of grants to archives to make accessible records and papers which document the history of modern physics and allied fields (such as astronomy, geophysics, and optics). Grants can be up to $10,000 each and can be used only to cover direct expenses connected with preserving, inventorying, arranging, describing, or cataloging appropriate collections. Expenses may include acid-free storage materials and staff salary/benefits but not overhead. The AIP History Center’s mission is to help preserve and make known the history of modern physics and allied fields, and this new grant program is intended to help support significant work to make original sources accessible to researchers. Preference will accordingly be given to medium size or larger projects for which the grant will be matched from other sources or by the parent organization. To apply send a letter of no more than three pages describing the research significance of the collection(s), plan of work, and budget, along with preliminary inventory (if available) and staff vitae to: Joe Anderson, Center for History of Physics, American Institute of Physics, One Physics Ellipse, College Park, MD 20740; Fax (301) 209-0882, e-mail: rja@aip.org. For grant guidelines or for more information on the Center and its programs, check our Web site at http://www.aip.org/history/grantguide.htm, or call (301) 209-3165. Deadline for receipt of applications is July 1, 1998. The program will be offered annually if funds permit.

Grants-In-Aid for History of Modern Physics and Allied Sciences
The Center for History of Physics of the American Institute of Physics has a program of grants-in-aid for research in the history of modern physics and allied sciences (such as astronomy, geophysics, and optics) and their social interactions. Grants can be up to $2,500 each. They can be used only to reimburse direct expenses connected with the work. Preference will be given to those who need part of the funds for travel and subsistence to use the resources of the center’s Niels Bohr Library in College Park, Maryland (easily accessible from Washington, DC), or to microfilm papers or to tape-record oral history interviews with a copy deposited in the library. Applicants should either be working toward a graduate degree in history of science (in which case they should include a letter of reference from their thesis adviser), or show a record of publication in the field. To apply, send a vitae plus a letter of no more than two pages describing your research project, and including a brief budget showing the expenses for which support is requested. Send to: Spencer Weart, Center for History of Physics, American Institute of Physics, One Physics Ellipse, College Park, MD 20740, (301)209-3174, fax (301)209-0882, sweart@aip.org. Deadlines for receipt of applications are June 30 and December 31 of each year.

Visiting Scholars Program
The Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center at the University of Oklahoma seeks applicants for its Visiting Scholars Program, which provides financial assistance to researchers working at the center’s archives. Awards of $500-$1,000 are normally granted as reimbursement for travel and lodging. The center’s holdings include the papers of many former members of Congress, congressional leadership, national and Oklahoma politics, election campaigns, as well as government policy affecting agriculture, Native Americans, energy, foreign affairs, the environment, and the economy. Topics that can be studied include the Great Depression, flood control, soil conservation, and tribal affairs. At least one collection provides insight on women in American politics. Most materials date from the 1920s to the 1970s, although there is one nineteenth century collection. The Visiting Scholars Program is open to any applicant. Emphasis is given to those pursuing post-doctoral research in history, political science, and other fields. Contact: Archivist, Carl Albert Center, 630 Parrington Oval, Room 101, University of Oklahoma, Norman, OK; (405)325-6372; fax (405)325-6419; kosmerick@ou.edu; http://www.ou.edu/special/albertctr/archives.htm.

Archival Outlook—March/April 1998
THE RECORDS OF AMERICAN BUSINESS

Edited by James M. O'Toole

This dynamic book explores the challenges of preserving the documentary record of American business enterprise, large and small. The book’s 14 essays explore such topics as the evolution of corporate archives, structural and functional analysis of records, electronic information and its impact, decision-making and organizational culture, visual and moving images as documents, business history as popular history, and guidelines for determining which organizations to document and which records to save. The contributors—drawn from major archival programs across the United States, Canada, and the United Kingdom—have thoughtfully considered the special problems and opportunities in preserving the records of local and international business. For those whose archival responsibilities include the selection and care of this documentary material, these essays will provide insight, advice, and encouragement. Beyond that, the book presents timely discussion of issues that are of pressing, day-to-day concern to all archivists.

Someone’s in the kitchen with Dinah
