GSA "Reign of Terror" Charged

In mid-October apparently well-founded rumors started to circulate about high level personnel changes slated at the National Archives and Records Service. The changes, ordered by GSA Administrator Gerald Carmen, would fill three of the seven positions just below Archivist and Deputy Archivist of the United States with former GSA executives with no specialized training or experience in archives and records management work.

In a statement released to the SAA Newsletter, Rep. Glenn English (D-OK), chairman of the House subcommittee which oversees NARS activities, said: "Even if some of the rumors during the last two weeks about personnel changes at the Archives are true, it would seem that the Administrator has decided to influence archives operations through a reign of terror. A few weeks ago I introduced a bill to reestablish the Archives as an independent agency. I was motivated in part by concerns that the Administrator was overly involved in the day-to-day operations of the Archives. The rumors certainly have not lessened by concern."

In communications to key members of Congress, SAA Executive Director Ann Morgan Campbell noted that the slated personnel changes were unprecedented in NARS' history and would create a situation in which no top executive could manage successfully.

At the end of October, rumors of pending personnel changes persisted and suggestions that GSA intended, with the stroke of a pen, to transfer management of Federal Records Centers from NARS to another GSA service were also widely circulated.

The latest GSA actions may have been triggered by the firm negative response of Archivist of the U.S. Robert M. Warner to GSA's attempts in September to name a new head of Presidential Libraries who was apparently selected on the basis of political affiliation rather than any known archival competence.

Meanwhile, the House NARS independence bill (H.R. 3987), introduced by English and Jack Brooks (D-TX), is gaining new sponsors, according to Page P. Miller, SAA's representative on Capitol Hill. Archivists interested in the future of the National Archives are urged to be in contact with their representatives in the House to enlist their involvement in this critical issue—one in which SAA has played a significant role since the mid-1970s.

Fellows and Award Winners Recognized

The winners of SAA awards and three new Fellows of the Society were honored at the SAA awards banquet in Minneapolis on October 7.

The Society's new Fellows, selected by the Professional Standards Committee chaired by Edward Weldon, are Sue E. Holbert, Minnesota Historical Society; Alan Ridge, Provincial Archives of Alberta; and Helen W. Slotkin, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Holbert was recognized for her work on many Society committees, including the Government Records PAG, of which she was the first chair, her service on SAA's Council, and her publications, in particular, Archives & Manuscripts: Reference and Access, part of SAA's Basic Manual Series. Ridge was honored for 35 years of service to the archival profession both in Canada and in Great Britain. He has been active on many SAA committees and in professional education and training. His experience with government, business, and university archives gives his extensive list of publications a unique perspective. Helen W. Slotkin has been very active on SAA committees and task forces. She has chaired the College and University Archives PAG, served on program committees for annual meetings, and currently is a member of the Goals and Priorities Task Force. She directs an important grant-funded appraisal project at MIT, which is active in the Joint Committee on the Archives of Science and Technology, and is one of SAA's representatives to NHPRC.

The Waldo Gifford Leland Prize, awarded to an outstanding published work in the archival field, was shared by James O'Toole for his Guide to the Archives of the Archdiocese of Boston and Lucy Fisher West for The Papers of M. Carey Thomas in the Bryn Mawr College Archives: Real Guide and Index to the Microfilm Collection. The Philip M. Hamer award for outstanding work be an editor of a documentary publication went to Robert E. McCarthy, Nathaniel Green Papers.

Two Colonial Dames Scholarships to the Modern Archives Institute at the National Archives were awarded in 1983. They went to Richard H.P. Lindemann, Emory University, and Thomas E. Camden, New Hampshire Historical Society. The Oliver W. Holmes (cont. on p. 2)
Task Force on Archives and Society

At its June 1983 meeting, SAA Council created a Task Force on Archives and Society to address the image/perception that persons outside the archival profession hold of archival work and the people who do it. Specifically, the Task Force is charged "to study and recommend ways and means that we as a profession in our societies (national, regional, state, and local), in our institutions, and as individuals can increase public awareness, understanding, appreciation, and support of archives and recordkeeping."

In the course of its work, the Task Force will draft a statement all archivists can use on the importance of archives to and in society; serve as a clearinghouse of ideas and information; and propose actions the SAA specifically can take.

The Task Force is chaired by Frank Mackaman, executive director of the Dirksen Congressional Center. Task Force members include Bruce Dearstyne, New York State Archives; Kevin Flood, National Archives Trust Fund Board; Linda Henry, American Psychiatric Association; James A. Nelson, State Librarian, Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives; and Faye Phillips, Troup County Archives.

The Task Force held its first meeting in Minneapolis in early October. As a result of that meeting, Task Force members are requesting that archivists submit to them their observations and anecdotes on the image of the archival profession and archivists as well as descriptions of any programs they have developed to deal with image problems. All such information should be sent to Frank Mackaman, Dirksen Congressional Center, Broadway and Fourth St., Pekin, IL 61554.

Award, given to support travel by a foreign archivist already in the United States, was presented to Stuart Strachan, National Archives of New Zealand.

The 1983 Awards Committee was chaired by V. Nelle Bellamy, Archives of the Episcopal Church. Awards Committee members were: Richard Cox, Mary Walton Livingston, and Jacqueline Goggin (Colonial Dames); Charles R. Schultz, Douglas Bakken, Sue E. Holbert (Distinguished Service Award—not presented in 1983); Fred Shelley, Karl L. Trever, William Miller (Leland Prize); H.G. Jones, Judith Schiff, Carolyn Mattern (Hamer Award); Mary J. Morgan, John Kinney, James M. O'Toole (Sister M. Claude Lane Award—not presented in 1983); and Trudy H. Peterson, Kenneth Duckett, William N. Davis, Jr. (Posner Prize).

What Council Did

At its October 1983 meetings in Minneapolis, SAA Council:

- Received from the study group on defining an archivist, a paper called "Archivist: A Definition" which will be published in the January SAA Newsletter for comment.
- Received the final report of the Task Force on Standard Reporting Practice (see pp. 13-16).
- Authorized the creation of a working group to gather documentation for use in the celebration of the Society's 50th anniversary in 1986.
- Authorized the creation of the C.F.W. Coker Prize for finding aids.
- Passed a resolution reaffirming and outlining ways to achieve SAA's commitment to improve the participation of minorities in the profession.
- Instructed SAA's NHPRC representatives to urge the Commission to conduct a nationwide search when replacing the director of the Records Program.
- Authorized adjustments in institutional dues from $50 to $65 and in sustaining member dues from $100 to $150, effective January 1.
- Selected Virginia C. Purdy as Council's representative to the Executive Committee for 1983-84.
- Heard that the Society's general fund expenditures for the period July 1982-June 1983 were $402,926, while income reached $415,659. In addition, grant expenditures for the period were $202,788.

November 1983 2
Nixon Materials Suit Filed

A group of 29 former Nixon aides, from Richard Allen through Ronald Ziegler, has filed suit in a District of Columbia U.S. District Court to challenge the release of 1.5 million pages of "special file" White House records from Richard Nixon's presidency. The suit contends that the public access regulations under which the files have been reviewed violate their privacy and confidentiality rights because there was unconstitutional Congressional involvement in the creation and review of the regulations.

The suit raises precisely the same matters which Richard Nixon himself raised some years ago and is to be argued by Nixon's attorney, Stan Mortenson. In a 1979 agreement with the government, Nixon had told a U.S. District Court that he would not raise the issue on which the aides' suit is based and this latest action is viewed by some as a way to circumvent that accord.

As the Newsletter went to press, it appeared that a number of organizations would seek to enter the suit as intervenors.

The special files consist of materials created in the individual offices of the aides and the President. Persons concerned were recently given the opportunity by the National Archives to review those files which they created in the 1969-74 period. According to one observer, the records may contain, for example, colorful observations about colleagues, congressmen, and federal judges—many of whom are still active.

Purely personal papers and materials relating to the exercise of private political association have already been withdrawn by NARS archivists.

Processing of Nixon materials began at the National Archives in early 1978. Well over 100 person-years have been devoted to the task. The White House tapes, the most celebrated of the materials, have undergone preliminary processing—which includes preparation of a subject outline for each tape. They are now being edited to excise two categories of information: purely personal and that to which access must be restricted because of national security, etc. It is anticipated that White House tapes may be ready for release in two years.

FBI Appraisal Decision II

The United States Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia ruled on September 30 in the case in which appraisal decisions on the National Archives regarding FBI records were contested by a number of plaintiffs, including the American Friends Service Committee.

The 95-page decision was still being analyzed as the Newsletter went to press. These findings were receiving considerable attention:

1) NARS archivists have no right to access to records for appraisal purposes without permission of agency heads. Appraisals may be made from agency-prepared lists. This finding addresses the contention of some parties to the suit that NARS had no right to inspect certain materials found in FBI files, specifically IRS, grand jury and electronic surveillance records. This finding seems to contrast with the earlier decision of the U.S. District Court which pointed to NARS' failure to inspect FBI records adequately.

2) The plaintiffs in the original case had standing to bring the action. The government had pointed to the purpose of records management and disposal laws "to require the establishment of standards and procedures to assure efficient and effective records management," and contended that this statement reveals "the laws . . . are 'housekeeping' statutes passed solely for the government's own benefit." Therefore, the government argues that private citizens and organizations had no standing to sue regarding appraisal decisions. The Court did not support the government's position, which had been prepared by the Department of Justice. This finding seems to suggest that any appraisal decision of the National Archives may be subject to judicial review.

Meanwhile, review of the massive NARS FBI appraisal plan, instituted in light of the earlier litigation, continues. The plan was submitted in November 1981 to District Judge Harold H. Greene. Seventeen NARS archivists, plus support staff, worked on the $500,000 project which was headed by SAA Fellows James E. O'Neill and Charles Dollar. (See F. Gerald Ham's review of the plan, American Archivist 45 (Fall 1982): 475-77.)

In the current fact sheet on the subordination of NARS to GSA issued by the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History, an organization whose lobbying efforts on behalf of NARS get significant financial support from SAA, the following key point is made: NARS' lack of authority over budget, program priorities, and personnel management has led to the devastation of morale among archival employees and to the perception both inside and outside the government that the National Archives is poorly managed. As long as the Archivist of the United States cannot speak out frankly about archival issues and problems, there will be no acceptable national archival program.

This point bears repeating by archivists in contacts to Members of Congress in support of passage of S.905 and H.R. 3987, bills to restore the independence of the National Archives and Records Service by separating it from the General Services Administration.
Humming the strains of Garrison Keillor's ode to archivists (see facing page), participants in SAA's 47th annual meeting in Minneapolis returned to their hometowns after an eventful week of discussion, instruction, sightseeing, and theatrical extravaganzas.

The meeting was preceded by four pre-conference workshops: Administration of Photographic Collections; Archives: An Introduction; Educational Program for Machine-Readable Records; and Introduction to Oral History. All four were well-attended and received enthusiastic endorsements from participants.

Tuesday, October 4, was devoted to meetings of committees and task forces. Other meeting participants joined the conservation tour, which took them to conservation labs at the Minnesota Historical Society and the Minneapolis Institute of Art, or the General Mills Tour, where they were able to view the company's extensive collection of archival songs and comedy sketches. Among the highlights were a cooking class using an archival processor, a scene between a researcher and a samurai archivist, and a demonstration by an archival terrorist group.

On Thursday, sessions began in earnest, with those on the various aspects of automating the archives being among the most popular. At the annual business meeting Thursday afternoon, a resolution was adopted calling on the local arrangements committee for future annual meetings to seek to make reasonably-priced child-care available for those SAA members who wish to be or must be accompanied by their children when they attend SAA meetings. Thursday evening, many meeting participants had the opportunity to attend a performance of the play The Entertainer at the renowned Guthrie Theater.

On Friday, meeting participants concentrated on attending sessions, open houses, and audio-visual presentations, and then relaxed at the awards banquet and reception.

The meeting officially concluded at 1:00 on Saturday, with incoming president David B. Cracy II addressing the closing luncheon on the topic, "Archives and Society: The First Archival Revolution," which will appear in the Winter 1984 American Archivist. Not everyone left following the luncheon, however. Three afternoon tours gave participants a chance to see a little more of the Twin Cities and environs, from the architecture of Frank Lloyd Wright, to historic Fort Snelling, to an apple orchard at the peak of the season.

The grand finale was the chance to be in the audience for the live Saturday evening radio broadcast of "A Prairie Home Companion" with Garrison Keillor. Keillor noted that a group of archivists was present in the audience and described them as "the people with the dust on their shoulders." He then proceeded to sing what he called "an archivists' union song" since as far as he could tell archives was one profession that didn't have a song of its own.

It was a satisfying and successful annual meeting, due in large part to the work of the Program and Local Arrangement Committees. The Program Committee, chaired by Linda Henry, included Patricia Aronsson, Lewis Bellardo, Paul Chesnut, Susan Davis, Victoria Davis, John Dojka, H. Thomas Hickerson, Joan Howard, Anne Kenney, Wilda Logan, Patrick Quinn, William Wallach, Thomas Wiltsted, and ex officio members James Fogerty, David E. Horn, Ann Morgan Campbell, and Deborah Risten.

The Local Arrangements committee was chaired by James Fogerty. Committee members included Bruce H. Bruemmer, John Davenport, Marie K. Elsa, Mary K. Jankiewicz, Bradford J. Jensen, Bryan C. Johnson, Jean M. Kirby, David J. Kraasen, Alan K. Lathrop, Dallas R. Lindgren, Lydia Lucas, Marion Matters, Dennis E. Meissner, Bonnie Palmquist, Mollie Price, Jean C. Toll, and ex officio members Ann Morgan Campbell, Antonia Pedroza, and Linda Ziemer.

So, until next year when SAA meets in Washington, D.C., August 30-September 3, "Keep your eyes upon the index and your hands upon the files."

All Archivists Stick Together

All Archivists Stick Together

Institutions are short-sighted,
Thinking only of today.
Dump their records in the corner,
Throw a lot of stuff away.
We must fight and fight the harder,
Buckle down, roll up our sleeve,
Let us make a better system
Information to retrieve.

All archivists, stick together.
Microfilm those dusty piles.
Keep your eyes upon the index
And your hands upon the files.

Papers flowing ever faster,
Every day another stack.
Every page has several copies,
Thanks to Xerox and Kodak.
Struggle on, you brave archivists,
Do not falter. Formulate
Integrated reference structures.
Keep your flow charts up to date.

All archivists, stick together.
Microfilm those dusty piles.
Keep your eyes upon the index
And your hands upon the files.

Lyrics © Garrison Keillor, 1983. All rights reserved. Sung to the tune of the hymn "Life's Railway to Heaven."
Mystic, Connecticut Texas A&M Archivist Charles Schultz spent the month of August in this New England town, researching sea stories of whaling ships and ships going to the Gold Rush. While looking through a Hawaiian newspaper of the 1850s, he came across the following story:

Sale of Washington's Farewell Address, and Other Valuable Relics—The Rotunda of the Merchant's Exchange was crowded to overflowing last evening on the occasion of the sale of the original manuscript of Washington's farewell address and other valuable relics. The sale commenced at seven o'clock, and the address was put up by Mr. Thomas, auctioneer, and Mr. Richard Willing offered as the starting bid $500. He did not appear willing to advance, and others entered into competition with considerable spirit. $550 was next bid, then $600, then $650, and then a jump was made to $1000, quickly $1100 followed, $1200, $1300, $1400, and so on until the sum of $2300 was named, and the document was knocked down to the Rev. Dr. Boardman. In a few moments Mr. Thomas said that he was authorised and pleased to state that the document would not go to Washington, D.C., as it had been purchased by Mr. Boardman for a gentleman who resides some distance from that place, as well as from Philadelphia. The announcement that the paper was not to go to Washington was received with considerable applause.

New York, New York A gala reception and auction for the benefit of the New York City Municipal Archives will be held on November 3. Mayor Ed Koch will be guest auctioneer for the event which will give the public a chance to bid on nonarchival ephemera and memorabilia relating to New York City's nineteenth-century past. Among the items to be auctioned are cast iron ornamental seals from the West Side Highway; photographic reproductions from early glass plate negatives of the Brooklyn Bridge and other historic scenes; expired saloon licenses from the turn of the century; and cancelled engraved bonds underwriting the construction of New York public works.

Scottsdale, Arizona An exhibition and potential sale of 100 drawings from the archives of the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation has raised questions from numerous scholars and architectural historians. They say that the sale will mean that a portion of the Wright archive, which now contains nearly all of the architect's drawings and records, will be scattered. The money from the sale of the drawings, which are priced from $5,000 to $100,000, will be the start of a fund of $20 million to restore Taliesin, Wright's home and studio in Spring Green, Wisconsin. Bruce Pfeiffer, the archivist at Taliesin said that the drawings which are going on sale roughly duplicate others in the collection. "There are several one-of-a-kind drawings in the sale, but for the most part we tried to choose things that will not deplete the archives," he said. But some scholars who are familiar with Wright drawings question the extent to which the drawings for sale are in fact duplicated by those that will remain in the collection.

For years, the foundation has rejected suggestions that the entire Wright archives be turned over to a museum. The goal, according to Pfeiffer, is "to work in the opposite direction" away from institutional affiliation and toward greater self-sufficiency. "This is what Mr. Wright wanted," he said.

Stony Brook, New York In mid-October, seven United States senators, Governor Cuomo of New York and hundreds of other guests gathered at the State University of New York campus in this Long Island community to dedicate the archives of former Senator Jacob K. Javits. The collection consists of over two million items, many of which have not been catalogued, but Javits, perhaps because of his poor health, felt it was time for the ceremony. Javits spent part of the last two summers doing work on the collection with the five archives staff members, headed by Mary Boccaccio, assigned to the project. Their work is funded by a $250,000 state grant. Boccaccio says she has never seen a collection quite like Javits'. "He was there so long. It's a very, very complete collection. It's like taking a course in post-World War II history."

Gamma Radiation as a Sterilant

The Alan Mason Chesney Medical Archives of The Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions has experimented with the use of gamma radiation as an exterminant for mold and insect infestation. The pilot project conducted by the Medical Archives indicates that:

1. (Gamma radiation is a highly effective exterminant for mold and insect infestation--295 record storage boxes of valuable historic papers with extensive mold and insect infestation were exposed to 0.45 megardas of gamma radiation (cobalt) for approximately 45 minutes.)

2. (Gamma radiation is an inexpensive and logistically simple process--The cost of having the infested materials treated with gamma radiation at a commercial radiation plant was $1.00 per cubic foot.)

3. (Gamma radiation in low and carefully regulated dosage will not damage paper and ink composition.)

4. (The gamma radiation process does not leave any hazardous residues (chemical or radioactive) on the treated papers.)

The pilot gamma radiation project was supported by an emergency grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Archivists will questions about this process may contact Nancy McCall, Chesney Medical Archives, 35 Turner Auditorium, 720 Rutland Ave., Baltimore, MD 21205, (301)955-3043.
Conservation Workshop Calendar

Administration of Photographic Collections

This workshop will address such topics as the historical development of photography, identification of images, appraisal and collecting policies, arrangement and description, and legal issues. Preservation, storage and handling, exhibition policies, and publication also will be discussed. This introductory workshop is open to individuals currently working with photo consultants. Tuition: $50. Instructors: Margery S. Long, Gerald J. Munoff, and Mary Lynn Ritzenthaler.

Basic Archival Conservation

March 26-28, 1984, Mississippi Department of Archives and History, Jackson.

Through a series of lecture/discussion sessions and the demonstration and practice of basic conservation techniques, participants will gain an introduction to archival conservation and learn means of integrating conservation practice into archival processing. Subjects covered include causes of deterioration, environmental controls, conservation administration, disaster preparedness, care of non-textual records, and preservation microfilming. A kit of conservation supplies provided to each participant is used during the hands-on practicum. Tuition: $75. Instructors: Edward R. Gilbert and Mary Lynn Ritzenthaler.

Contact Linda Ziemer, SAA headquarters, 600 S. Federal, Suite 504, Chicago, IL 60605, for an application or additional information. These workshops are funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Photographic Consultant Service

The SAA photographic consultant service, part of the NEH-funded Basic Archival Conservation Program, will assist archival and manuscript repositories in evaluating the needs of their photographic holdings and developing programs to manage photographic materials from an archival perspective. Consultant visits will be of one day in duration, and will focus on such concerns as identification, arrangement and description, access, preservation, and storage. A written report containing program recommendations will be submitted following the site visit. The service is available on a cost-sharing basis. For an application or further information, contact Mary Lynn Ritzenthaler at SAA headquarters.

SAA Publishes Conservation Manual

The Society of American Archivists has added a new title to its list of publications on archival topics. Archives & Manuscripts: Conservation, A Manual on Physical Care and Management, by Mary Lynn Ritzenthaler, addresses problems and issues in archival conservation and offers solutions to assist archivists in caring for their collections from a sound conservation perspective. It emphasizes the need to consider conservation as an integral part of existing archival and curatorial functions. Chapter headings include the following:

- Conservation Philosophy
- Nature of Archival Materials
- Causes of Deterioration
- Creating a Suitable Environment
- Storage of Archival Materials
- Integrating Conservation and Archival Administration
- Conservation Treatments

The manual is extensively illustrated with photographs and drawings, and also contains a bibliography and glossary of terms. It was written under the auspices of SAA's Basic Archival Conservation Program, which is funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

To order, complete the form below and return it to SAA, 600 S. Federal, Suite 504, Chicago, IL 60605. Checks should be made payable to the Society of American Archivists.

Final Report of Task Force on Standard Reporting Practice

The SAA Task Force on Standard Reporting Practice was appointed in 1980 and charged to recommend a small number of the most valuable measures for archives and manuscript repositories to collect and report on their holdings and operations, and to provide standardized units of measure where necessary.

The Task Force members were Katherine Emerson, chair, Nicholas Burckel, David Klaassen, Penelope Krosch, Sidney McAlpin, Arthur Murdoch, Adele Newberger, Charles Schultz, Carolyn Sung, Richard Szary, and JoAnn Williamson.

The meetings of the Task Force in 1980, 1981, and 1982 were supplemented by "table topics" and program-discussion sessions at the SAA annual meetings in 1981 and 1982 and sessions at three regional archival associations in 1982 and 1983. Correspondence within the Task Force has been supplemented by contacts with many other SAA groups and individuals. A draft report was published in the July 1982 SAA Newsletter and comments received in response. All suggestions have been considered carefully and the proposal strengthened considerably as a result. There has been a developing consensus, which is represented in the recommendations below.

Task Force members believe that these recommendations go as far as the profession can go toward standardization at this time. The measure most likely to be controversial, the linear measure of holdings, is the only measure of holdings likely to be acceptable to those now using item counts on the one hand and those using cubic measure on the other. The main effort of the Society now, the Task Force feels, should not be in spelling out additional measures but in encouraging adoption of this modest number of essential items. SAA's Task Force on Institutional Evaluation seeks reaction from institutions that implement the reporting practices recommended here.

Recommendations for Reporting on Archives and Manuscript Collections

A. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

These recommendations have been prepared to assist archivists and manuscript curators in collecting and reporting useful statistical data common to archives and manuscript collections by indicating and defining appropriate measures for obtaining quantifiable information. They are intended to provide a body of comparable and valid data on the status of archives and manuscript repositories. They are not intended to represent the full range of activities of any repository, but to recommend the most valuable measures.

It is recommended that, wherever applicable and feasible, information be recorded and reported separately and identified as:

(1) archives of the parent institution or government;
(2) manuscripts, including the archives of other institutions; and
(3) total of archives and manuscripts.

Where resources, staff, or activities are shared between archives and manuscripts, or with other types of materials (such as rare books), estimates should be provided (by proration as appropriate) and indicated as such [by listing in brackets].

B. HOLDINGS

1. Basic Report - Every effort should be made to convert all of a repository's holdings to linear or cubic feet as indicated in a. and b. below, or their estimated equivalent. If this is not possible, the report in B.2 should indicate which materials are not included in the Basic Report in B.1.

   a. Materials stored on shelving, or in drawers that are suitable for letter-size or legal-size paper files, should be reported in linear feet of shelving and drawer space occupied.

   b. Materials stored in units of other dimensions, such as microform cabinets and map cases, should be reported in cubic feet for the Basic Report.

   c. Total feet of holdings. For the Basic Report, cubic feet (for b) may be added to linear feet (for a) at a 1:1 ratio.

   d. Total number of (1) Archival record series (2) Manuscript groups.
Reporting, cont.

2. Report by Format - In addition, some repositories may find individual counts useful for various types of materials. In such cases the units of measure below should be used. Any such itemization should be understood to represent a subset, or breakdown for special purposes, of the total feet of materials reported in B.1 above. Please indicate any unavoidable exceptions as specified in B.1.

a. Textual materials, typically on letter-size or legal-size paper, that are legible without magnification or machine interpretation: linear feet of shelving and drawer space occupied. A count of items may be added at the option of the repository, in addition to, but not instead of, the report of footage.

b. Microfilm: number of reels. Include all copies, whether for use, security, reproduction, or other purposes.

c. Flat microforms: number of separate pieces of microfiche, ultraviolet, micro-opaque sheets, micro-opaque cards, and aperture cards. Include all copies as for b. If microforms have not been previously counted, the total number of each format can be derived from the average number of pieces per sample foot of each.

d. Photographs and other graphic materials, except cartographic: (1) ordinarily, by linear or cubic feet occupied, as specified in B.1.a and b; or alternatively, (2) by number of separate pieces, such as number of photographs, prints, architectural plans.

e. Cartographic materials: number of sheets of maps plus items of other formats.

f. Audio materials: number of cartridges, cassettes, discs, reels, etc.

g. Motion pictures: number of cartridges, cassettes, loops, reels, etc.

h. Video materials: number of cartridges, cassettes, discs (non-digital), reels, etc.

i. Machine-readable materials: (1) number of programs, and (2) number of data files.

C. CHANGE IN HOLDINGS

Totals accessioned and removed from holdings during the year.

1. Accessions, including accretions: number of receipt transactions.

2. Physical size of accessions including accretions, in units used to report holdings in B.

3. Physical size of materials removed from holdings, in units used to report holdings in B.

D. PROCESSING: ARRANGEMENT AND DESCRIPTION

1. Total work accomplished during the year, as in Table 1. It is possible for a series or group to be listed as described at one level of detail in one year and listed again if processed in more detail in a later year.

2. Processing status of holdings at end of year, by level of access.

a. Percentage of total footage of holdings that were covered at end of year by finding aids, or self-indexed, at the record series or manuscript group level.

b. Percentage of total footage of holdings that were covered at end of year at the record series or manuscript group level and also by more detailed finding aids, or self-indexed (a subset of D.2.a).

c. Percentage of the total number of record series and manuscript groups held that were covered at end of year by finding aids, or self-indexed, at the record series or manuscript group level.

d. Percentage of the total number of record series and manuscript groups held that were covered at end of year at the record series or manuscript group level and also by more detailed finding aids, or self-indexed (a subset of D.2.c.).

G. DEFINITIONS

Most terms used in the "Recommendations" are defined in "A Basic Glossary for Archivists, Manuscript Curators, and Records Managers," by Frank B. Evans et al, American Archivist 37: 415-433 (1974); also available in pamphlet form from the Society of American Archivists, Chicago. Additional terms not adequately defined for this purpose in a standard dictionary are defined below.

daily visits. The sum of daily counts of users who spend all or part of any day in the repository. A user is counted only once on any day, and is reported again on each subsequent day in the repository.

full-time equivalent (FTE). The number of staff working full-time as defined by the reporting repository plus the FTE of part-time staff. To calculate the latter, add the total number of hours worked per week by all part-time staff and divide the number of hours considered by the repository to be a full-time work week.

reference request. A request made by a user for a repository to supply information about or from archives, manuscripts, or records, or for use or copies of them. A request is counted only once, at the time the response is made.

self-indexed. Arranged in such an order, usually alphabetical or numerical, that the materials can be located without separate finding aid.

The International Council on Archives announces the Xth International Congress on Archives September 17-21, 1984, in Bonn, West Germany. The theme of the Congress is "The Challenge to Archives: Growing Responsibilities and Limited Resources." More information on the Congress can be obtained by contacting Dr. Klaus Oldenhage, Postfach 320, D-5400, Koblenz, Federal Republic of Germany.

Archival institutions and individual archivists are eligible to become members of ICA. The yearly dues for an individual are $50 and for an institution, $30. To join ICA and find out more about the benefits of membership, write Secretariat, International Council on Archives, 60, rue des Francs-Bourgeois, 75003, Paris, France.

SAA is tentatively planning an archives study tour in conjunction with ICA's 1984 meeting. Watch future issue of the Newsletter for details.

Council Drafts Consultant Suggestions

In response to requests from various subgroups within the Society, most notably the Business Archives Section, that the Society develop guidelines to be used by institutions seeking the services of a consultant in archives, SAA's Council drafted the following suggestions:

1. Review SAA's "Principles of Institutional Evaluation." These will introduce to you the elements of an archival program important to your institution.

2. Review more detailed SAA guidelines where these exist, e.g., the Business Archives Guidelines and the College and University Archives Guidelines.

3. Make certain that your consultant is knowledgeable and experienced in:

   A. institutional planning, evaluation, and administration in an archival setting.

   B. contemporary archival practice in core archival functions, including records appraisal, arrangement and description, preservation.

   C. the types of historical records to be collected or created by your organization and the archival appraisal of such records.

SAA members are encouraged to submit comments on these recommendations. Comments should be sent to SAA, 600 S. Federal, Suite 504, Chicago, IL 60605.

Coker Prize Established by Council

At its meeting in Minneapolis in October, SAA Council approved the establishment of the C.F.W. Coker Prize for finding aids, in memory of Fred Coker who died last June.

Contributions from Coker's relatives and friends are being received by SAA to support the award.

Coker, a Fellow of the Society, served as associate editor and editor of The American Archivist, editor of SAA’s first basic manual series, director of the National Archives’ Modern Archives Institute and a member of SAA’s editorial board.

The Coker Prize will be awarded to an archival finding aid of exceptional merit. The recipient of the award will be selected from nominations received by a subcommittee of SAA’s Awards Committee and an announcement of the winner will be during the Society's annual meeting each fall.

Instructions on submitting nominations for the Coker Prize will be published in an upcoming issue of the SAA Newsletter.

New Location for SAA Headquarters

As of November 1, 1983, SAA's headquarters office in Chicago will have a new home at 600 S. Federal, Suite 504, Chicago, IL 60605. The telephone number remains the same.

The new offices are located in an area just south of Chicago's Loop called Printers Square, which has been designated as a National Historical Landmark. A few years ago, the area was primarily a printing district, but the rise of the South Loop as a residential area prompted developers to convert the old printing warehouses into additional residential and commercial space.

The move is an economy measure for SAA. Rental rates at the Wells Street site were slated to rise considerably in the future. The new offices will provide SAA with an almost comparable amount of space and offices designed to better meet the needs of the Society.

SAA members who are in Chicago are cordially invited to pay a visit to the headquarters in its historic new home.
