1989 Survey of Archivists

By the time you read this article, you should have SAA’s 1989 Survey of Archivists on your desk. Perhaps you have already completed the two-page questionnaire, which is included on pages 19 and 20 of the official SAA ballot. If you have returned it to the SAA office, thank you for assisting in this important study. If not, please take a few minutes today to answer the seventeen questions.

The purpose of the survey is to construct a portrait of the background, functional responsibilities, and institutional affiliations of individual, student, and associate members of SAA. The survey form is also being distributed to regional archival associations, so that they may carry out comparable surveys of their own members. The questionnaire is nearly identical to those used in studies that SAA carried out in 1979 and 1982.

Please be assured that your responses to the 1989 Survey of Archivists will be kept in strictest confidence. Do not sign the questionnaire or the accompanying ballot. The special committee that tallies the votes for Vice President, Council, and Nominating Committee will open the envelopes containing the survey forms and separate them from the ballots. Responses to the survey will be tabulated in April and May. The findings will be summarized in the SAA Newsletter this summer and reported in detail at the SAA annual meeting in St. Louis.

Preconference Workshops for SAA’s 53rd Annual Meeting

You can start planning now to attend one of SAA’s preconference workshops in St. Louis, October 23-25, 1989. The following list of scheduled workshops and seminars has been provided now so that everyone can begin to obtain the necessary approval and can include the workshops in budgets for the coming year. The date and cost of individual workshops may change slightly, but the following information will facilitate preliminary planning.

Please note three changes from last year:

(1) admission to several of the workshops and seminars will be by application rather than registration;
(2) all application/registration forms will be enclosed with the annual meeting registration packet; and
(3) all prices quoted are for SAA members. Non-member prices will be higher.

Anyone interested in receiving application/registration forms for a specific workshop or seminar via first class mail please take note:

(1) write Nancy VanWieren at the SAA office, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your name and the name of the workshop(s) or seminar(s) you are interested in attending:

From the Executive Director’s Desk

by Donn C. Neal

According to the president of the Chicago Association of Society Executives, Ronald S. Moen, most associations today can be described as “profit-driven,” “market-driven,” “staff-driven,” or “member-driven.” This got me to thinking about what is driving SAA.

First and foremost SAA is, I think, member-driven. It exists only because the members have found that through collective action they can accomplish things that they could not accomplish otherwise, and SAA members are loyal to it only as the Society continues to respond to their needs.

When I came to SAA from a consortium of colleges and universities, where I spent a great deal of time and energy struggling to get representatives of those ten fine but fiercely independent institutions interested in working together, then-President Bill Joyce advised me that in SAA I would find no shortage of suggestions about cooperative projects nor lack of interest in how SAA could help its membership. Instead, he said, the problem would be choosing which projects to undertake and how to channel the expressed interest to make SAA effective.

And so it has been. With SAA, the real constraints are the resources—both human and financial—available to meet the many demands on the Society. SAA often has to make some hard choices among the projects that we can undertake, and it is not always possible to make the best use of the considerable energies that we seem to enjoy.

Being member-driven is not without its shortcomings. Council, committees, and other SAA groups sometimes assign to staff members tasks we would rather not have to do, ask questions that are difficult to answer, and otherwise do things that we here occasionally grumble about. Those who volunteer for SAA projects—and even those who take on an obligation to deliver—sometimes are unable to meet deadlines, to produce acceptable work, or to deliver at all. And although SAA is fortunate to have a high level of membership interest, there are still those members who never really get involved in SAA activities or who don’t respond to the most vigorous efforts to capture their interest or participation.

But without the active involvement of the members in various projects and initiatives; without their participation in the governance of the association; without their evaluation and criticism—and, in other words, their “ownership” of the organization, an association becomes nothing more than a commercial operation. The shortcomings I have mentioned are, as Mr. Moen put it, “a small price to pay for maintaining member direction.”

Let’s also remember, however, that an association like SAA depends as well upon its full-time, professional staff for continuity and effectiveness. The people listed on this page help SAA to implement the good ideas that the Society can undertake and bring to these projects and initiatives the experience and knowledge that they have gained not only through working for SAA but from other positions as well.

An organization as large, complex, and ambitious as SAA could not exist without a capable staff to enable it to achieve the expectations that the members bring to it. (Meeting those expectations gives birth to even higher ones, of course, but that’s the subject of another column!) Staff thus help to drive an association like SAA.

In fact, the combination of commitment and energy coming from involved members and from professional staff alike is a difficult one to beat, and I think that SAA benefits as well as any association does from this kind of combination.

What about being “profit-driven” and “market-driven”? No one understands more than I do that SAA has to realize sufficient return on its many activities if it is to continue to thrive. Publications that we undertake should sell enough copies at least to pay back the costs of producing them. Without the kind of subvention that we have had over the past couple of years from NHPRC and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the educational workshops that we sponsor cannot do less than break even. New projects that don’t produce much if any revenue add to SAA’s operating expenses and stretch human resources a little thinner.

This does not mean that SAA is simply looking for projects that result in a positive cash flow: some things ought to be done, and indeed must be done, if the Society is in fact to remain member-driven. Even if some programs and services don’t bring in enough revenue to pay for themselves, therefore, they are so important that they should be subsidized by the members’ dues. It is for this reason that we have to keep firmly in mind the fact that SAA is a membership organization, and that its first obligation is to provide its members a fair return on their dues dollars.

SAA’s officers, Council members, and others involved in the governance of the Society need to know what our programs and services actually cost (including staff time) so that they can help to determine how to divide up inevitably inadequate human and financial resources. Keeping the “market” in mind, and aiming to maximize SAA’s return on its investment in programs and services, is only prudent management of the association so that it can continue to do the good work that it has done for more than fifty years now.

Moen argues for a balance among the four forces that he cites, and I agree. If any one of them becomes predominant, the association suffers. Your involvement in SAA’s many activities is most welcome: volunteer by writing to me, to our current president, Frank Evans, or to our president for 1989-90, John Fleckner. Let us know about ways we can serve your interests better. And help us to increase membership in the Society so that we can build the resources, human and financial, to do more for that membership.

And as Bartles—or is it Jaymes?—says, “thank you for your support.”

What Council Did...

At its meeting on February 2-5, 1989, the SAA Council

• discussed with Roland Baumann, Chair of the Membership Committee, the Committee’s report on its progress toward a comprehensive membership strategy for the Society;
• approved a final version of procedures for the Interim Board for Certification to use in handling petitions for certification;
• elected Anne Diffendal and Nancy Sahli to the Professional Standards Committee;
• met with the members of the Committee on Goals and Priorities and approved the Committee’s proposal to institute a three-year planning process for all of the Society’s units, beginning in 1990;
• accepted the final audit statement for SAA’s 1987-88 fiscal year;
• approved the Editorial Board’s recommendation that James O’Toole be selected as the author of the introductory volume in the Archival Fundamentals Series;
• authorized an ad hoc Council committee to explore the possibility that SAA engage in limited fundraising activities and to develop a plan of action for doing so;
• approved guidelines for the Committee on Education and Professional Development;
• on the recommendation of the Awards Committee, created a new SAA award for archival advocacy and named it after J. Franklin Jameson;
• began to review the process by which Council establishes and reassesses its own goals and priorities;
• declined to impose a formal policy on letters to the SAA Newsletter, leaving the matter to the judgment of the Executive Director;
• approved two new roundtables: Lesbian and Gay Archives and Art and Architecture Thesaurus Users;
• heard progress reports from Council committees that are reviewing SAA’s guidelines for sections and roundtables and studying the Society’s representation to other organizations and bodies;
• approved a resolution endorsing the White House Conference on Library and Information Services;
• decided to ask the chairs of SAA committees, SAA’s representatives, and the heads of sections and roundtables to meet with their respective Council committees at the annual meeting, rather than with Council as a whole;
• held an executive session in order to discuss with the Executive Director his performance review and extension of his contract past 1989; and
• set June 1-4 as the date of the next Council meeting, which will be held in Chicago.

For more information about any of these matters, contact an officer, a member of Council, or the Executive Director.

Future Annual Meetings Schedule

The SAA Council and staff members are re-evaluating the structure of the Society's future annual meetings, beginning with that in 1990, in order to ensure that the SAA annual meeting continues to satisfy the diverse needs of the membership.

At its meeting on September 27, 1988, the SAA Council discussed alternatives to the traditional schedule and expressed a preference for the alternative printed on this page. When looking at this alternative, bear in mind that any changes would not take effect until 1990 at the earliest. The 1989 SAA annual meeting will resemble the 1988 meeting in most particulars.

No substantial changes in the annual meeting schedule will be instituted without thorough discussion of the pros and cons of the revisions. We invite you to express your opinion about this theoretical model so that we can determine whether or not it would better meet the membership's multiple--and often conflicting--needs at its annual gathering.

The most significant changes included in this model for 1990 and later years are the following:

- concentrating all committee and task force meetings during a five-hour period, instead of spreading them over an entire day, so that we make more efficient use of "committee day";
- moving one of the two blocs of Section meetings from Thursday morning to Wednesday afternoon (Functional and Institutional Sections might alternate which group meets on the earlier day) so that we could begin program sessions one day earlier than at present;
- creating an "exhibit bloc" on one of the meeting days—a time when no other events would conflict with participants' opportunity to visit the displays of vendors in the exhibit hall;
- carving out a longer (and tables, which presently meet only ninety minutes--usually over lunch;
- holding the "opening luncheon" on the first day of the meeting, Thursday, rather than on Friday;
- shifting the awards ceremony from the Presidential Address session to the annual Business Meeting, where it might be more appropriate; and
- concentrating many of the tours earlier in the week, so that most of them would not conflict with program sessions.

Most of the other features of the traditional meeting would continue as before in this model. There are as many blocs of sessions, and the general layout of the week remains as at present. Most attendees who were not involved in committees, workshops, or tours could arrive on Thursday and could leave on Sunday afternoon, as now.

One other change, which is being implemented in 1989, is also reflected in this design: the replacement of "open houses" with another device for accomplishing the purposes that open houses were created to meet: a series of two-hour "office hours" in the exhibit hall that SAA groups can request on a first-come, first-served basis.

This change will free up the time currently set aside for open houses (several hours, over three days), enabling us to achieve a less hurried schedule. It will also leave the luncheon periods on two days completely free of scheduled events so that individuals and groups will have time available for their own meetings.

The new "office hours" will enable SAA groups and meeting attendees to discuss informally the purposes and activities of those groups--not unlike the way regional archival organizations have, over the past several years, used their table in the exhibit hall to acquaint persons with their purposes and activities. There will be no charge for using a table for "office hours" will have the added advantage of bringing a larger number of persons into the exhibit hall.

The SAA annual meeting, like all events of its type, is a dynamic and evolving mechanism for bringing SAA members and others into contact with one another, with exhibitors, and with new ideas. We believe that the annual meeting schedule must remain flexible enough to accommodate changing needs, and that we must experiment with different patterns that will enable the Society to meet those needs.

It is unlikely that all of the changes projected in this model for 1990 and after will be implemented, but circulating this model should spark the rethinking of the annual meeting schedule that is needed from time to time. Please direct any comments about the potential changes to Donn Neal or Georgeann Palmer.

American Archivist Seeks Book Reviewers
Anyone interested in reviewing books or other materials, or suggesting titles for review, should send his or her name, address, phone number, and areas of interest to the Editor of the Reviews Section. Anne R. Kenney, Conservation Department, Olin Library, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14850.

Editor of Non-Serial Publications Sought
The Executive Committee has authorized the Editorial Board to recruit for the position of Editor of Non-Serial Publications. The principal work will be to carry out the editing of manuals, readers, and other SAA publications other than the American Archivist, the SAA Newsletter, and the Archival Fundamental Series. The Editor will also participate in the development of concepts for new publications, the recruitment of potential authors, and the evaluation of their proposals.

There is no allocation for this position in the current SAA budget, but there may be provision for expenses or a small honorarium beginning next year. Workload will depend on authors' progress, but the board hopes to have several new publications each year for the next several years.

Candidates should have proven writing and editorial skills, and be widely knowledgeable in matters of professional interest to archivists and manuscript curators.

If you would like to be considered for a one-year appointment, send a letter of application, a resume, and the names and addresses of two references to Susan Grigg, Chair, SAA Editorial Board, Sophia Smith Collection and College Archives, Smith College, Northampton, MA 01062. (413)585-2985. Your application must be postmarked by 7 April 1989.

Annual Meeting Roundup

1990 Annual Meeting
Seattle, Washington
SAA is considering a post-convention seven-day cruise to Alaska in 1990. The cost is approximately $1,500-$2,000. We are also looking into the possibility of a four-day cruise to the Puget Sound area only. Please contact the SAA office to express your interest.

Louis Daguerre Comes to St. Louis
It was back in 1839 that the French painter Louis Daguerre introduced his new photographic method to the world: producing pictures on chemically treated metal or glass. In observance of the 150th anniversary of this event, the 1989 Program Committee has scheduled a series of sessions pertaining to the history of photography.

Of course it is not possible for Louis himself to come to St. Louis, but those who attend the SAA Annual Meeting have a unique opportunity to learn about the photographic process that Daguerre invented, and also to purchase the ultimate gift for the proverbial "someone-who-has-everything." Dr. Robert Shlaer, the world's only full-time daguerreotypist, will present a special focus session that demonstrates this oldest of photographic processes.

In order to defray the cost of his travel to St. Louis, Dr. Schlaer will also be on hand to produce daguerreotype portraits for interested annual meeting participants. Portraits will be available at $200 apiece, satisfaction guaranteed. Since the number of people who can be accommodated is limited, sitters will be scheduled on a first-come, first-served basis.

Anyone interested in taking advantage of this rare opportunity, please call Gary Saretzky (609/734-5744) who is coordinating Dr. Shlaer's appearance at the meeting.

NAGARA Preservation Planning Project
Last September, the National Association of Government Archives and Records Administrators (NAGARA) Committee on Preservation Issues began work on a two-year project to produce and field test an archives preservation planning manual and resource notebook. Archives will use these products to formulate plans to assure adequate, systematic, and economical preservation of their holdings.

Program Director Bonnie Rose Curtin is currently developing the product for testing next year in the state archives of Florida, Hawaii, Illinois, Oregon, Vermont, and at the Troup County Archives in Georgia. An historical society, to be determined, will serve as a field test site.

An automated collection management system software package that runs on IBM personal computers and compatibles, and eventually networks and the UNIX operating system, is now available.

Called Minaret, the package supports the MARC format. In addition to the AMC (Archives and Manuscript Control), VM (Visual Materials), and Authority formats, users can create non-MARC databases to store other information. The MARC format permits the exchange of data with other institutions, and the freedom to use alternate systems in the future. The formats can be modified by the user to expand the capabilities of the software.

Minaret costs $595 for the PC version. A demonstration system is available with working software, a full manual, and a limit of twenty data records for $50. For more information, contact Cactus Software, 850 N. State Street, Suite 2F, Chicago, IL 60610-3352, (312)642-8655.

"Library Standards for Archival Description"
October 23-24
Fee: $225.00
Enrollment will be limited to 25
This two-day workshop introduces archivists to the use of Anglo-American Cataloging Rules, 2nd ed. (AACR 2), for personal, corporate, and geographic names; and Library of Congress Subject Headings (LCSH) for subject access. These are cataloging tools developed in the library community, but their use is required for archives participating in bibliographic networks (like RLIN or OCLC) and local online public access catalogs.
The development of this workshop is funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.
Note: The Workshop is not intended to deal with MARC format issues, nor with thesauri or controlled vocabulary lists other than LCSH. Participants are assumed to be familiar with principles of archival arrangement and description, including Archives, Personal Papers, and Manuscripts.

Who should attend?
The workshop is for archivists who:
- are engaged regularly in description and cataloging, or who manage such programs;
- are preparing catalog records for a bibliographic network or an integrated catalog (archival materials together with individual books, visual materials, etc.); and
- have had little or no formal training in library cataloging (especially the use of AACR 2 and LCSH), or whose training and experience pre-dates AACR 2.

For further information contact Marion Matters at 612/698-6949.

"Oral History in the Archives: An Introduction"
October 23-24
Fee: $150
Enrollment limited to 25
Instructors: William J. Marshall, University of Kentucky; James E. Fogerty, Minnesota Historical Society
This two-day workshop introduces basic oral history techniques and procedures. It provides archivists with the knowledge to begin an oral history program, as well as valuable insights into oral history methodology and project management for those who have fledgling or intermediate programs. Special emphasis will be placed upon legal issues relating to oral history and videotaping oral interviews.

Advanced Appraisal Workshop
October 23-24
Fee: 125.00
Enrollment limited to 25
Instructors: Frank Boles, Bentley Historical Library; Julia Marks Young, University of Southern Mississippi
Building upon the concepts taught in SAA's workshop in the fundamentals of appraisal, this advanced workshop is intended to provide experienced archivists with direct and comparative appraisal experience. Working within the framework of their own repository's collecting policy or emphasis, participants will use the "black box" appraisal taxonomy to evaluate a variety of manuscript materials and records at the record group/collection, series, and item level. The workshop will also suggest teaching techniques and strategies for appraisal.

Admission will be on an application basis. Although the instructors will explain how to use the "black box" appraisal taxonomy, applicants must be archivists or manuscript curators with a thorough understanding of appraisal fundamentals, and must possess direct appraisal experience.

Archival Administration of Machine-Readable Records
October 23-24
Fee: $175
Enrollment limited to 25
Instructors: Ross J. Cameron, NARA; Donald F. Harrison, NARA; Alan S. Kowlowitz, New York State Archives; Michael L. Miller, NARA
This two-day workshop will provide an overview of the procedures and accepted practices used in archives to administer machine-readable records programs. The workshop will cover the basic steps of inventory, appraisal, accessioning, processing and description, research use and reference services, and maintenance and preservation, focusing on the special needs and requirements of machine-readable (computer-generated) records.

This is a beginning level workshop for archivists who want to learn how to handle machine-readable records in an archives. Participants should be familiar with archival theory and practice for traditional (paper-based) records, but knowledge of computers and data processing is not required. The workshop will open with a session on basic computer concepts for participants who have no experience in this area. The workshop is sponsored by the SAA Committee on Automated Records and Techniques (CART).

"Archives: An Introduction"
October 23-25
Fee: $200.00
Enrollment limited to 30
Instructors: David Horn, Boston Edison Company; Megan Floyd Desnoyers, John F. Kennedy Presidential Library
An introductory workshop designed for those who have been assigned responsibility for archival or manuscript collections, but who have little or no previous training in archival work. It provides an overview of basic terminology and common archival functions as well as law, ethics, and other professional concerns.
"Introduction to General Diplomatics"
October 24
Fee: $75.00
Enrollment limited to 20
Instructor: Luciana Duranti, University of British Columbia

This workshop will introduce archivists to the science of general diplomatics, which had its origin in the need to distinguish an authentic document from a forgery. An important part of our European archival heritage, the science of diplomatics is seldom taught in graduate education programs in the U.S. or Canada. Using modern North American documents as examples, the instructor will introduce diplomatics as it is used in Europe—to identify, appraise, and describe documents on the basis of their functional forms. This scientific approach can lead to a precise and uniform archival terminology and to more standardized appraisal and descriptive practices.

Information Management and Machine-Readable Archives
October 24
Fee: $75.00
Enrollment limited to 25
Instructors: David H. Herschler, U.S. Department of State; John McDonald, National Archives of Canada

This workshop is for archivists who have responsibility for the records of a medium or larger sized organization. The objectives are to provide: 1) a general understanding of information management concepts and how archivists can apply these to the retention and conservation of machine-readable records; (2) practical guidance concerning the manner in which retention and preservation practices can be integrated into information management programs with emphasis on those components that influence the design of automated information systems; and (3) an understanding of how an effective institutional retention and preservation program for machine-readable records can be established.

This workshop is designed for archivists who have had some experience with managing automated records in an archival context. It should be particularly useful for those who have already taken SAA's workshop "Starting a Program for Electronic Records."

Arrangement and Description
October 25
Fee: $75.00
Enrollment limited to 25
Instructors: Virginia J. H. Cain, Emory University, Ellen Garrison, Center for Popular Music, Middle Tennessee State University.

Arrangement and description lie at the heart of archival practice and are the primary means by which archivists link documentary materials to the information needs of users. This workshop is designed to help participants develop the analytical and decision-making skills they need to carry out this important task.

Through lecture, discussion, and individual and group exercises, workshop participants will review the terminology of arrangement and description and will learn more about applying fundamental principles and concepts to both archival and manuscript collections. The instructors will discuss traditional forms as well as automated records and automated descriptive techniques.

The instructors will emphasize the point of view and the philosophy that underline these techniques, with the goal of helping participants to think critically about both the product and the process of arrangement and description.

What Happened at MARBI?

by Lisa Weber and Marion Matters

The MARBI meeting held January 7-10, in Washington, D.C., was, Lisa Weber reports, a satisfying conclusion to several years on the “front lines.” Undoubtedly the most gratifying part was that so many other archivists attended. Kathleen Roe (SAA’s incoming MARBI Liaison) and Marion Matters attended the entire meeting. Jackie Dooley, Alden Monroe, Michael Fox, Ted Weir, Barbara Orbach, and David Bearman were also present at various times.

It was a good meeting, even though all “major” issues have been deferred until the summer meeting in Dallas, which Kathleen and Marion will attend.

Here are the highlights:

• Format integration: Sally McCallum of Library of Congress announced that it would not implement format integration until 1993. The bibliographic utilities will do the same. This gives us some time to make sure our needs are met.

• Proposal 89-3: Make bibliographic field 851 obsolete; with changes to holdings/bibliographic field 852. The issue for archivists is the need to have available in the bibliographic record an eye-readable (i.e., not coded) field for the name and location of the repository holding the materials described in that record.

The proposal would have made obsolete field 851, the field that currently holds repository location information, and substituted a revised field 852. Field 852 comes from the holdings format (something archivists have had little experience with), although apparently it could also be used in the bibliographic format.

Oddly, there was also a related proposal to let another interest group (CONSER, concerned with serials) retain field 850 for reasons similar to our reasons for wanting to keep 851.

In the end, the entire 850/851/852 problem was folded into a general examination of the holdings format, which is currently under revision. This would be a good opportunity for archivists to become more familiar with the holdings format.

• Proposal 89-5: Changes in the coding practices of 008/07-14. This relates to the fixed fields for beginning date and ending date. As approved, the proposal would allow archivists to continue to use the value “9999” in the fixed field space for ending date for “open” record series. It would also valid date for AMC certain codes in 008/06 (the fixed field for type of date); namely “c” (serial item currently published), “d” (serial item ceased publication), and “u” (serial item status unknown). If interpreted in the archival context, such codes might be useful for both archival record series and general schedules.

• Discussion Paper No. 26: Leader/06 (also concerning leader/08 and fixed fields 008/006). The problem with leader byte/06 is that it perpetuates confusion between “type of material” and “type of control”. The discussion paper, which will become a formal proposal for the summer meeting, contained a recommendation to separate the two concepts. It would redefine leader/06 code “b” from “archival and manuscripts control” to “mixed collection” (denoting a type of material); and it would define a new leader byte, leader/08 for type of control. The new byte would at present have only two codes, blank indicating bibliographic control and “a” indicating archival control. In the future it might also hold a code for some type of museum-oriented control.

In conjunction with the proposed definition of a repeatable field 006 to hold coded information on additional type of material characteristics as needed, this could be a good solution.

Archivists need to clarify what “archival control” really means, and to consider how the materials in archival collections should fit in the present scheme of leader/06 codes.

Descriptive Standards

A Brief Report on the Initial Standards Working Group Meeting

by Victoria Walch and Marion Matters

The Working Group on Standards for Archival Description, a project funded by a grant from NHPRC and sponsored by Harvard College, held its first meeting last December at the University of Maryland, College Park. During the meeting, described by one participant as "intellectually engaging," the group discussed the nature of archival description and how its processes and products might be improved through the development, formal adoption, and widespread use of standards. It also contended with the idea that in some areas, although standards might be preferred, they might also be impossible to achieve.

For the purpose of discussion, the group began to sort out previously identified "standards" in several ways. They might be internal standards, those developed specifically by and for archivists, or external standards, those developed by other bodies but that are useful for or have an impact on archival descriptive practices or on archival records themselves.

Standards might come in different "strengths." Technical standards are explicit and, if properly followed, lead to consistent results. Conventions lead to similar but not identical results. Guidelines are suggested practices.

Finally, there may be standards for information systems, data structures, data content, or data values. For example, the cataloging manual Archives, Personal Papers, and Manuscripts is an internal data content convention.

The working group developed a list of ten criteria that could be used to evaluate the potential benefits of adopting existing standards, creating new ones, or influencing their development by parties outside the archival profession. These criteria include considerations such as cost-effectiveness, immediacy of the need or effect, and breadth of applicability.

Members of the working group will now prepare background papers on such topics as the potential for developing guidelines or conventions for archival information systems, the impact of format integration of archival uses of the MARC format (a technical data structure standard), the rationale for adopting particular data value standards (like controlled vocabularies), and the relationship between description standards activities in the U.S. and Canada.

The group will reconvene in June, 1989, to discuss issues as well as to consider the mechanisms necessary for evaluating, developing, adopting, or promoting use of standards by archivists.

The group expects to present a report with recommendations during a session at the SAA Annual Meeting in St. Louis and will also hold an open meeting to encourage a full exchange of ideas among the large number of interested parties.

The project director and chair of the working group is Lawrence Dowler. Its members are David Bearman, Lynn Bellardo, Jean Dryden, Steven Hensen, Thomas Hickerson, Marion Matters, Fredric Miller, Harriet Ostroff, Kathleen Roe, Leon Stout, Richard Szary, and Sharon Thibodeau. Also attending the meeting from the NHPRC were Nancy Sahli and Lisa Weber.

To receive further information, or to request a summary report from this first meeting when it becomes available, contact Victoria Walch, Description Standards Project Coordinator, 65 N. Westminster St., Iowa City, Iowa 52245, or call (319)338-6650.

- Discussion Paper No. 25: Handling multiple version linkage needs.

This discussion paper was very much oriented toward the problem created by microforms of serials and by major preservation microfilming programs that are producing master negatives and microforms of books. Version was defined rather narrowly in terms of "alternate physical form." The paper recommended designating a "focal record" for any bibliographic entity existing in multiple versions, then linking associated records to it using the control number of the focal record.

Discussion focused on: 1) the definition of version (too narrow); 2) the awkwardness of trying to build links into the MARC format; and 3) the distinctions between the kinds of linking information required for record distribution or exchange, and the kinds of information required to process or display a record in a local system.

The discussion was inconclusive, but other groups, especially LC's internal MULVER committee, will continue their investigations. Archivists need to articulate and communicate their interest in the handling of records for multiple versions--beginning with analysis of what "multiple version" could mean for us.

If you have ideas or concerns about MARC format revision, contact Kathleen Roe at (518)474-8319, or Marion Matters at (612)698-6949.

The SAA office is accepting donations of posters and other artwork that archival repositories would like to send. There are lots of bare walls to cover, and so we would welcome some visual materials from archives, libraries, historical societies, and other institutions.
Copyright News
A Report from the SAA
Copyright Task Force

by Suzanne Steel, Cathy Henderson, and Bob Byrd

In September 1987, SAA Council re-chartered the Copyright Task Force for a three-year period. It was charged with monitoring legislative, judicial, and other developments relating to copyright and the administration of archives and manuscript repositories.

An earlier task force, established to represent the Society in the first five-year review of section 103 of the Copyright Act of 1976, expired in 1985. Also in 1985, the Society published Gary M. Peterson and Trudy Huskamp Peterson's Archives & Manuscripts: Law, which contained a succinct overview (pages 81-89) of copyright law and its implications for archival administration.

Since 1985 there have been a number of copyright-related court cases and actions by public officials that are of interest to the archival community.

1. Library Reproduction of Copyrighted Works. In the report of the Register of Copyrights on the second five-year review of section 108 of the Copyright Act of 1976 (Public Law 94-553; Title 17, United States Code), issued in January 1988, the Copyright Office again maintained, as it had in the first five-year review, that subsections (d) and (e) of section 108 do not apply to unpublished works. These subsections are the only provisions in the law that explicitly permit libraries and archives, under certain conditions, to prepare and distribute to a user a photocopy of a copyrighted work.

SAA, through its Copyright Task Force and its publications, has maintained that these subsections allow archivists to photocopy unpublished works for their patrons, whereas the Copyright Office continues to reject this interpretation.

To date, no action has been taken by Congress to clarify the intent of the law, and no judicial decisions have addressed this issue.

The Supreme Court rejected the argument, ruling that fair use is more limited in applicability to an unpublished work than to a published work because of the author's right to control the first public appearance of the work. The decision is significant for archivists because it tends to restrict fair use, as defined in section 107 of the copyright statute, as a basis on which researchers may photocopy and quote from unpublished works held by archives.

3. Salinger v. Random House Inc. 811 Federal Reporter 2d Series 90 (1987). This case arose from author J.D. Salinger's desire to prevent quotation and even paraphrasing from his unpublished letters in a biography by Ian Hamilton. The United States Court of Appeals ruled that even Hamilton's paraphrasing of passages from the letters, which were held by major manuscript repositories, violated Salinger's copyright because the paraphrases exploited the essence of Salinger's expression.

Citing the Harper & Row case, the court maintained that though fair use applies to unpublished works, its scope is narrower than with published works because of the author's right of first publication. The decision was upheld by the Supreme Court. The repositories' right to hold the letters and allow access to them by researchers was not challenged.

4. New Era Publications International, ApS v. Henry Holt and Co. DC SNY No. 88 Civ. 3126 (PNL), 8/9/88. More recently, in denying a request for an injunction to prevent publication of a biography of the late L. Ron Hubbard, founder of the Church of Scientology, the U.S. District Court of New York held that Russel Miller's use of the quotations from Hubbard's previously unpublished letters and journals in Bare-Faced Messiah: The True Story of L. Ron Hubbard, was permissible as fair use of copyrighted material.

The ruling recognized the narrower scope of fair use with respect to unpublished works, as indicated in the preceding Nation and Salinger cases, but maintained that the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals had not meant to eliminate the applicability of fair use to unpublished works. Where Miller quoted Hubbard's unpublished works not merely to enliven his text, but to prove his points, the use was permissible.

If followed by other courts, this ruling is important particularly because it does much to clarify the preceding Nation and Salinger cases. Of great interest are five examples cited in the court's decision of instances in which an author's unpublished words are themselves the facts (facts cannot be copyrighted) and can, therefore, be quoted under the fair-use provision. Further information concerning this ruling is available in BNA's Patent, Trademark & Copyright Journal, vol. 36, no. 897 (September 15, 1988), pp. 486-489.

5. Immunity of states and state employees. Richard Anderson Photography v. Brown (852 Federal Reporter 2nd Series: 114), argued in the U.S. Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit, and decided July 20, 1988, involves allegedly unauthorized use of photographs by the public relations department of Radford University, a public institution in Virginia. The photographer sued the university and its public relations director. Both claimed immunity under the Eleventh Amendment. The court upheld the university's claim of immunity, but also held that the public relations director could be sued as an individual and that state sovereignty

The case involved state immunity from suit under the Eleventh Amendment; it did not address the actual question of infringement. Although the case does not directly involve archivists, it does have implications for archivists who are state employees and can no longer rely on Eleventh Amendment protection.

In a related development, the Copyright Office has recommended that Congress use power granted by Article 1 of the Constitution to abrogate the Eleventh Amendment immunity of states in copyright cases, allowing them to be sued for copyright infringement. See Copyright Liability of States and the Eleventh Amendment (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Copyright Office, June 1988). Senator Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., has declared that the Senate Copyright Subcommittee will actively pursue this recommendation in the 101st Congress. He expects remedial legislation to pass quickly in response to an October 3, 1988, California federal appeals court ruling that states are exempt from the Copyright Act. See Publisher's Weekly, November 11, 1988, p.16.

6. Adherence to Berne Convention. In October 1988, the U.S. Senate ratified the treaty document for U.S. adherence to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. The Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988 changes U.S. copyright law to conform to the requirements of the Convention. Of potential interest to archivists are the exemption of works that are not of U.S. origin from the registration requirement as a precondition to an infringement suit, the elimination of recordation of transfer of copy-right as a prerequisite to a suit by a transferee, the doubling of statutory damages for infringements, and the exclusion of the moral rights provisions of the Berne Convention.

Archivists may be interested also to learn of the creation of the Association for Copyrighted Enforcement (ACE) last summer. Chaired by Alexander C. Hoffman, ACE plans to press suits against corporations it believes to be violating the Copyright Law by excessive photocopying. Texaco is a particular target at this time, but as Hoffman has been quoted as saying, “there’s no shortage of people to whom we might address ourselves.” See Publisher’s Weekly, August 5, 1988, pp. 10-11.
Certification Update

by Paul Chestnut

The SAA Interim Board for Certification (IBC) met in Washington, D.C., on January 16. The need to refine procedures for the review and evaluation of petitions was discussed at length. Procedures developed at this meeting were presented to Council in February.

Council expressed its wishes to maintain the anonymity of reviewers evaluating petitions and set 45 days as the maximum period during which appeals may be submitted by unsuccessful applicants. Review of petitions received from members of the IBC and its Petition Subcommittee is now assigned to the Executive Committee of Council.

The Board’s professional consultant and legal counsel have indicated that these actions will assure the fair and objective review to which the IBC and Council are committed. Review of all petitions received thus far will be in accordance with these revised guidelines, and those waiting to hear from the Board will receive letters as quickly as possible.

Discussion of the certification process has continued at a number of regional meetings, and several more sessions are scheduled for spring. Donn Neal, SAA’s executive director, has reported on the petition and examination development procedures this fall and winter to several regionals and will be on several more programs this spring.

Nick Burckel, SAA Council member, spoke in December to the Kansas City Area Archivists. Tim Ericson, SAA’s education officer, will speak at the Society of Florida Archivists meeting this spring. Roy Tryon, a former member of IBC, will discuss the certification process at the Southeast Archives and Records Conference spring meeting.

In addition, a session on certification programs in several professional organizations was included in last fall’s MARAC program. Tables were set up at both the MAC and MARAC fall meetings, at which knowledgeable archivists were available to offer assistance in understanding the petition process and to distribute petitions to potential applicants. Other regionals are encouraged to consider similar sessions and to write or call me if I can assist in securing speakers.

Several archivists have indicated that their repositories are willing to cover the application and certification costs. I’m not so lucky, and I doubt many of us are, but it appears that it may be worth it to some of us to ask our bosses if such a service is available.

It may also be worthwhile to keep records for a possible income tax deduction. I called the American Society of Association Executives to inquire about the tax status of certification fees, and even though that organization has its own certification program and serves others with similar ones, I received only a qualified yes (a polite way of describing “We think so but aren’t sure.”). We will continue to pursue this matter, however, and will ask our legal counsel and members of other organizations who may have the information we seek. I may even try to call the IRS, but not any time soon.

Art and Architecture Thesaurus

by Toni Petersen

The Art and Architecture Thesaurus (AAT) held a review on January 6 of some of its terminology that might have pertinence for archival description. The AAT, which has been under development since 1980, is part of the Getty Art History Information Program. The review group of six archivists convened by AAT director Toni Peterson, and hosted by John Fleckner at the National Museum of American History consisted of Larry Dowler, Kathleen Roe, Alden Monroe, Avra Michelson, and Tom Hickerson.

The AAT is a faceted thesaurus arranged in 37 separate hierarchies. The hierarchies under current discussion were Document, Types, Drawings, Image and Object Genres, People and Organizations, and Functions. These hierarchies include a total of approximately 2,100 terms plus synonyms. Many of the terms are accompanied by scope notes or definitions. Publication in print and machine-readable form is planned for later this year.

Concurrently, the AAT in MARC format will be mounted on RLIN’s authorities subsystem, alongside LCSH.

The review group agreed that the five hierarchies examined were comprehensive enough to satisfy archival needs as long as AAT maintains

Certification Grant

A donor who wishes to remain anonymous has presented a gift of $1,000 to subsidize payment for eight candidates whose petitions are approved for certification. Applicants for the $125 subsidy must submit their petitions between April 1 and May 31, and include a brief statement indicating their need for financial support to seek certification.

This gift was motivated in part by the donor’s wish to make certification by petition available to qualified archivists who might not be able to apply without the hope of financial assistance. The donor’s generosity and professional concern are very much appreciated.

Report from the User Community to the National Archives

NCC member organizations, meeting in Cincinnati, endorsed the NCC report, "Developing a Premier National Institution: A Report from the User Community to the National Archives." Earlier in November, the Joint Committee of Historians and Archivists, which served as an advisory committee for the report, officially endorsed the report. The NCC member organizations determined over a year ago the need for a report, and its preparation has been a major activity of the NCC.

All of the NCC member organizations place a high priority on the welfare of the National Archives. Thus the report represents the views of the friends of the National Archives, who are outside the Archives but nevertheless well acquainted with many inside aspects of its operation, familiar with archival policies, and particularly attuned to the needs of the users.

Looking beyond the limitations caused by sharp budget cuts in 1981 and 1983, and beyond the internal restructuring necessary to facilitate the pending move to Archives II, a new archival facility, this report identifies some specific goals for strengthening the National Archives and conveys the concerns of the NCC about future directions for this important institution.

Goals for the future, not past and current constraints, are the focus of the report. It is the hope of the NCC that this report may provide a perspective that can be useful to those who plan policy, to those who appropriate funds for the National Archives, and to our joint efforts to strengthen the National Archives.

Single copies of this 40-page report may be obtained from Page Putnam Miller, NCC, 400 A Street, S.E., Washington, DC 20003.

Declassification of Thirty-Year-Old Documents

The NCC member organizations will seek in 1989 to bring attention to the inadequacies of the current federal declassification policies, and to suggest some short and long term solutions for addressing these problems. Federal documents thirty years or older should, with few and precisely delineated exceptions, be available for scholarly research.

Decisions to continue classification beyond thirty years should be supported by a compelling rationale, and agreed upon by the head of the agency concerned and the U.S. Archivist.

For a briefing sheet on the background of this issue, the key issues involved, and the actions needed, contact Page Putnam Miller, NCC, 400 A Street, S.E., Washington DC 20003.

its policy by which any user may suggest new candidate terms. AAT will be useful for archival description. It will save archivists from having to assemble the resources that would be required to produce a controlled vocabulary.

An AAT Roundtable has recently been established by SAA and will have its first official meeting this fall at the annual meeting in St. Louis. Archivists who are interested in working more closely with the AAT to test the thesaurus in their descriptive cataloging process should contact Toni Petersen or Cathy Whitehead, User Services Coordinator at (413)458-2151. More information about the thesaurus is available from AAT, 62 Stratton Road, Williamstown, MA 01267.

and former U.S. Senator Gaylord Nelson, with other plaintiffs, filed suit on January 19 against President Reagan, President Bush, and the U.S. Archivist to prevent the destruction of secret National Security Council internal computer messages, commonly known as PROFS (Professional Office System, originated by IBM). The National Archives' position has been that most of the items on the electronic tapes were brief messages, equivalent to telephone slips, and that substantive statements or memos of permanent value were printed out and preserved in paper form.

Armstrong, however, maintains that the Iran-Contra affair demonstrated that many important messages existed only on tape. In response to the suit, the White House has stressed that there was nothing improper about the destruction of the electronic tapes because leaving the National Security Council computer clogged with Reagan administration data would be a handicap to the new administration.

The restraining order to prevent the destruction of the electronic records was originally to expire on January 30. However, the judge has extended the time and a hearing may not occur until mid-February. Members of both the Senate and the House have expressed concern about this matter because it raises larger questions about the authority of the Archivist and federal policies for dealing with electronic records.

Selection of NHPRC Interim Executive Director

Last December it appeared that the search for a new executive director of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission was drawing to a close. In the beginning of January, however, U.S. Archivist Don Wilson announced that Richard Jacobs, director of the external affairs staff, would serve as the interim executive director of NHPRC, and that a new search process would be undertaken. One of the factors contributing to this decision was the reconfiguration of membership on the NHPRC Commission, mandated by reauthorization legislation.
