You ought to be in SAA!

Receiving the SAA Newsletter is but one of the many benefits of joining the Society of American Archivists. The newsletter provides timely information about what's going on in the archival profession. If you are looking for fraternity among your peers, professional development, business contacts, job opportunities, subscriptions to this newsletter and the American Archivist quarterly journal, and much, much more, then

You ought to be in SAA!

SAA, founded in 1936, is the oldest and largest national professional association for archivists and institutions interested in the preservation and use of archives, manuscripts, and current records. Society members serve in government agencies, academic institutions, historical societies, businesses, museums, libraries, religious organizations, professional associations, and numerous other institutions. Still interested? We would like to hear from you. For information about joining SAA, contact Debra Mills, Society of American Archivists, 600 S. Federal, Suite 504, Chicago, Illinois 60605, (312) 922-0140.
Council Rejects Association Management Route

At its meeting in Montreal, SAA Council voted unanimously to discontinue its investigation into contracting with an association management firm. This decision came at the end of a six-month period, during which SAA explored association management services with a number of firms, and conducted a parallel analysis of the central office staff functions and services currently offered. Association management firms conduct the operations of many professional organizations, combining resources to effect economies of scale in such areas as printing, meeting and conference planning, public relations, and purchasing.

Council has been considering a restructuring as a means to improve member services and to contain costs. In the past four years, the number of SAA groups has increased by 55 percent, with the most striking growth coming in the number of roundtables. The number of workshops, publications, and other central office services have also increased, while the number of staff has only increased slightly. This level of activity reflects the diversity of member interests and attests to the health and vitality of the Society. It also puts a severe strain on current SAA resources. The executive director has expressed concern with the heavy office workload, and a number of important membership initiatives can not be supported with available resources.

This situation is compounded by the necessity of having to undergo a second executive director's search after just three years. Anne Diffendal's contract expires at the end of March 1994, and she is not interested in renewal. Council had briefly considered an association management firm in 1990 when the last executive director, Donn C. Neal, left, but had felt then that there was insufficient time to investigate this option fully. With two years left in Anne's tenure, Council last spring determined that there would be time to explore association management firms while allowing the Society to undertake a search for a new executive director if the association management option did not prove viable.

In June, the Executive Committee met with representatives of a prominent association management firm in Chicago, and recommended to Council that this option be fully explored. A committee of Council consisting of Frank Burke, James Fogerty, Mary Janzen, Bill Maher, Bill Wallach, and myself, solicited proposals from a number of firms, met extensively with representatives from one firm, and provided information to several others. As part of its investigation, Council approved a schedule that called for the submission of preliminary proposals from respondents by the end of August for consideration in Montreal. This was to be followed by further negotiations, with final proposals due by January 5, 1993, for consideration at the January Council meeting. Five firms responded with proposals in time for consideration in Montreal.

In early September, a number of individuals compared the most complete proposal received to the existing SAA structure and concluded that the central office performed most of the suggested services for approximately $20,000 less. It appeared to some Council members that the economy of scale promised by an association management firm could not compete with the economy realized by the dedication and commitment of the current SAA staff. Concern was also expressed that the proposal did not address critical services provided by the SAA office, including continuing education, cost share for the preservation grant and future grants, grants development, and the nonserial publications program. Finally, in the course of this investigation, Council confirmed that the strong archival presence in the central office, which is critical to SAA's membership, could be very difficult to accommodate with an association management firm.

While recognizing that the proposals received were preliminary, Council debated whether there was sufficient evidence to conclude that an association management firm was not the right choice for SAA at this time. Most members were convinced that the further effort needed by Council, the central staff, and the association management firms to address remaining concerns would have been extensive and, in the end, would not have resulted in a decision to proceed with this option. In the meantime, SAA would have continued to risk losing valuable staff members to more secure jobs.

While we have terminated the investigation into association management firms, SAA's problem of balancing current and future demands with limited resources continues. This disparity will require the Society to choose among competing activities and to tie financial and other resources to their implementation. The adoption of a strategic plan for the Society would be a step in the right direction, and Council will be considering CGAP's proposed plan in January. At the same time, a Task Force on Sections and Roundtables is being appointed to evaluate the effectiveness of these groups, SAA's support for these activities, and their role in developing and implementing a strategic plan for the Society.

Finally, as Council begins to search for the next executive director, it will consider not only the qualifications and duties of the chief staff officer, but it must also consider how to make the most effective use of available resources, how to respond to member needs, and how best to represent the interests of the profession as the largest national association of archivists. I welcome your suggestions as we begin this process.

In closing, I want to acknowledge with thanks the help of Brenda Banks, Frank Burke, Jim Fogerty, Mary Janzen, and Bill Maher in preparing this report.
Eight New Fellows Honored at SAA’s 56th Annual Meeting

At the awards ceremony during SAA’s 56th annual meeting in Montreal, John Fleckner, chair of the Professional Standards Committee, introduced eight new Fellows of the Society of American Archivists: Linda Edgerly, Carolyn L. Geda, Susan Grigg, Margaret Hedstrom, Linda Matthews, Mary Jo Pugh, Victoria Irons Walch, and Daniel T. Williams. The distinction of Fellow is awarded to a limited number of individuals for their outstanding contribution to the archival profession.

“Election as a Fellow is a unique honor among the Society’s awards because it recognizes long-term contributions to the profession as a whole, rather than a single accomplishment,” Fleckner noted during his opening remarks.

These eight Fellows—Edgerly, Geda, Grigg, Hedstrom, Matthews, Pugh, Walch, and Williams—join 97 other active SAA members so honored. The Professional Standards Committee evaluates nominees on the following criteria: appropriate academic education and professional and technical training; a minimum of seven years professional experience in any of the fields advancing the Society’s objectives; writing of superior quality and usefulness in advancing the Society’s objectives; and contributions to the archival profession through work in and for the Society.

“The eight archivists honored today more than meet the formal criteria [required by the Society]. As I read the dozens of letters of support for these women and men, it was clear that they share other qualities as well,” stated Fleckner. “First, they are in this profession for the long haul. Even the most junior has been an SAA member for twelve years; the most senior for twice that. Second, while each has held very visible and important elected and appointed posts, their colleagues speak again and again of their many ‘unsung,’ behind-the-scenes contributions. In particular, colleagues speak of mentoring and assisting younger and newer archivists and of other acts of generosity which make the life of our profession so rich and rewarding.”

As specified in the SAA Constitution, election as a Fellow is by a 75 percent vote of the Professional Standards Committee. The Committee consists of the five immediate past presidents and three fellows selected by Council. The members this year were Ed Bridges, Nicholas Burckel, Frank B. Evans, John Fleckner, Linda Henry, Sue Holbert, William Joyce, and Trudy H. Peterson.

Meet the New Fellows

Linda Edgerly, of the Winthrop Group, Inc., has served the Society as a Council member, chair of the Business Archives Section, and active participant in a host of other SAA and regional archival groups. In each instance, her service was marked by hard work and significant results. Her consultant services to more than sixty corporations and other organizations have established and improved many archives programs and assured the preservation of invaluable historical records. To her colleagues, Linda is a model of professional integrity and commitment.

Carolyn L. Geda, of the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research at the University of Michigan, has lead the archival profession into the modern world of electronic records. For nearly twenty years, she has written, taught, and advocated on behalf of archival development in this field. She was co-chair of SAA’s Automated Records and Techniques Committee for eleven years and author and editor of key publications introducing archivists to machine-readable records. She has played a vital role in the outstanding success of her own institution’s development. Lastly, she has been a unique bridge between our profession and the broader community of data librarians, scholars, and others involved in electronic records.

Susan Grigg has brought dynamic leadership to SAA’s publications program as chair of the Editorial Board. As a result of her tireless efforts, SAA’s publications list is far stronger and its publications policies and procedures more effective. Susan’s report as chair of a working group on certification was the basis for SAA’s subsequent adoption of this program. She also served on the original Committee on Goals and Priorities. At three different repositories Susan has provided exceptional professional leadership with an emphasis on cooperation among archival institutions. Her writings on archival administration, women’s history, and historical method reveal her keen intelligence and solid scholarship.

> Margaret Hedstrom, of the New York State Archives and Records Administration, is best known for her contributions to improving the archival administration of electronic records. As author of an SAA basic manual, committee chair, teacher, and colleague she has generously shared her extensive knowledge. In her own institution, her organizational skills and leadership earned her New York state government’s first annual award for excellence in information management. As a member of the Committee on Goals and Priorities, Margaret organized the 2020 VISION Program for the 1992 annual meeting and played a key role in drafting a strategic plan for the Society. Other evidence of Margaret’s professional breadth includes her attention to issues of access and appraisal and her integration of her own scholarship in labor and women’s history into her thinking about archives.

> Linda M. Matthews, of Emory University, has served SAA and the Society of Georgia Archivists for twenty years on governing councils, editorial boards, and a host of task forces, committees, and advisory groups in areas as diverse as publications, copyright, and annual meeting program. Her hard work, wise counsel, and effective leadership have won her deep respect from her colleagues in each of these efforts. As director of the Georgia Archives Institute she helped to redefine this important educational program and she continues to serve on SAA’s Education Office Advisory Board. Her success with Emory’s archival program since 1972 has earned her additional administrative responsibilities within the University Library.

> Mary Jo Pugh, a consulting archivist and lecturer at the University of California, Berkeley, School of Library and Information Studies, has earned distinction as a practicing reference archivist, editor, author, teacher, and leader within the Society. Her influential ideas on reference and access are embodied in her prize-winning 1983 article and her recent contribution to the Archival Fundamentals Series (for which she also edited three additional volumes). During her membership on the Committee on Reference and Access she drafted a statement eventually adopted by SAA and the Association of Research Libraries. As chair of the Task Force on Institutional Evaluation she prepared the booklet Evaluation of Archival Institutions, undertook pilot evaluation site visits, and administered the first census of archival institutions. Lastly, Mary Jo served with distinction on the SAA Council.

> Victoria Irons Walch, a consultant, has contributed to the Society in a wide array of positions. She has served on Council and chaired the Standards Board, the Description Section, and the Nominating Committee. She also has served on the steering committee of the Government Records Section, on the Committee on Archival Information Exchange, and the Task Force on Automated Records and Techniques. Her service to the profession in her role as a consultant is equally diverse and impressive. Her skills as a thinker, writer, and organizer have been vital to the work of the Committee on the Records of Government, the NAGARA Information Needs Assessment, the Harvard Working Group on Standards for Archival Description, the CGAP Five-Year Assessment, and the Automated Records and Techniques Curriculum Project. These efforts have been among the most influential projects in the field and the selection of Vicki to assist with them is a resounding measure of the profession’s respect for her contributions.

> Daniel T. Williams, of Tuskegee University, has been a university archivist for twenty-four years. His contributions to the profession extend throughout the region, the country, and internationally. At Tuskegee he has produced guides to special collections and archives and to the Carver Papers and he has received many campus honors. In Alabama he has been a member of the State Historical Records Advisory Board, president of the Friends of the Alabama Archives, and a participant in a host of other history-related organizations. He has given special attention to the preservation of African American historical materials lecturing on this topic at many American universities and at universities in Senegal and Guadeloupe. He also has served as a consultant on archives to the National Business League, to the Martin Luther King, Jr. Papers Project, and to many other organizations. Dan has served SAA on the Editorial Board, the Program and Awards committees, the steering committee of the College and University Archives Section, and the African American Archivists Roundtable. Finally, his visibility and his contributions have been a model to many aspiring African American historians and archivists.

A staple at every conference of the Society of American Archivists is the venerable awards ceremony, which honors individuals and groups in a variety of categories for their contributions to the archival profession during the past year. At SAA's 56th annual meeting in Montreal, hundreds of attendees packed the ballroom of the Le Centre Sheraton Hotel on Tuesday evening, September 15th, to pay tribute to the following honorees and their achievements.

Distinguished Service Award
The Oberlin College Archives received the Society's highest honor, the Distinguished Service Award, which was established in 1964 to recognize an archival institution for outstanding public service and an exemplary contribution to the archival profession. The Oberlin College Archives is the eighteenth recipient of the award.

In 1986 when the archivist of the Oberlin College Archives resigned, the Ohio college considered discontinuing the department. Instead, Roland Baumann was hired as the archivist and the archives program was not only revived, but expanded and made a vital part of the college. Among the archives' accomplishments are publishing a Guide to the Women's History Sources in the Oberlin College Archives and numerous information leaflets on archival holdings; establishing a summer research grants program; receiving an NHPRC grant; implementing a records management program; and increasing acquisitions, as well as patron use. In short, the archives has become a model for the profession of what is possible in a small college setting.

Hamer-Kegan Award
Elaine Forman Crane of the Fordham University Department of History, and the Northeastern University Press were the recipients of the Philip M. Hamer-Elizabeth Hamer Kegan Award, as editor and publisher of The Diary of Elaine Drinker. Published in 1973, this award is given to an individual and/or institution that has increased public awareness of a specific body of documents. The award is named in honor of two SAA Fellows and past presidents.

This three-volume edition, prepared with support from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission and other agencies, is the first publication to provide broader access to the complete, unabridged text of Elizabeth Drinker's diary. Drinker was a Quaker woman who was born in 1735 in Philadelphia and lived there until her death in 1807. Beginning in 1758 and continuing for nearly 50 years, she kept a diary, a document that now offers historians a rare woman's view of life in the 18th century.

Because of Drinker's role as wife, mother, and caregiver, her diary is an especially rich source of information about contemporary medical practices. It also documents domestic life and child-rearing; the varied roles of women in the community; the gradual urbanization of Philadelphia; and the progress of the American Revolution, including harassment suffered by Quakers during the war.

The careful and thorough transcription and annotation of the manuscript by Elaine Crane and Northeastern University Press, combined with genealogical information on the Drinker family, a biographical directory, and a comprehensive index, will be appreciated by a wide variety of researchers and scholars for years to come.

Sister M. Claude Lane Award
Sr. Mary Linus Bax of the Sisters of Precious Blood is the recipient of the Sister M. Claude Lane Award for her significant contribution to the field of religious archives. Established in 1974 and conferred annually, the award is sponsored in conjunction with and funded by the Society of Southwest Archivists.

Sr. Mary Linus started her career in religious archives in 1975. Since the very beginning she was involved not only in managing the archives of her religious order, but also in assisting novice archivists in their search for archival proficiency. Together with Sr. Evangeline Thomas and Fr. Norbert Brackman, Sr. Mary Linus was a presenter in twelve workshops conducted throughout the United States, and variously sponsored by the Leadership Conference for Women Religious, the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Bergamo Center of Dayton, Ohio.

Besides imparting archival principals to hundreds of participants, Sr. Mary Linus was also available for consultation at religious archives in the United States, Canada, and Rome, Italy. At the same time she also lectured on archival and related topics. Through these activities she has demonstrated her commitment to education and training for beginning archivists, as well as to their continued progress and professionalism.

In addition, Sr. Mary Linus compiled a first-of-its-kind Policy Manual for religious archivists. The manual, which has been widely disseminated, has become the prototype for the formulation of policies by archives of many religious communities in the United States and abroad. Sr. Mary Linus has also made available a Manual for Annals and a Manual for Procedures, which were written for Salem Heights Archives but are easily adaptable to other archival institutions.

Waldo Gifford Leland Prize

Managing Archival and Manuscript Repositories, by Thomas Wilsted and William Nolte, received the Waldo Gifford Leland Prize for writing of superior excellence and usefulness in the field of archival history, theory, or practice. Established in 1959 and conferred annually, the award is named for one of America's archival pioneers and SAA's second president.

In Managing Archival and Manuscript Repositories—the third volume published by SAA in the Archival Fundamentals Series—Wilsted and Nolte define and explain basic management concepts and terms, and then apply these to the archival context. They note the importance of vision, good planning, and performance in the effective management of repositories. This widely beneficial and useful work has set a new standard for future works on this topic.

Wilsted is associate director/operations for the American Heritage Center at the University of Wyoming in Laramie. Nolte is with the National Security Agency Library in Ft. Mead, Maryland

Theodore Calvin Pease Award

Roy Schaeffer, a student at the University of British Columbia, received the Theodore Calvin Pease Award for superior writing achievement by a student of archival administration. Schaeffer is the fourth recipient of the award, which was created in 1987 and is named in honor of the first editor of the Society's quarterly journal, the American Archivist. The award is endowed by a gift from Mrs. Marguerite Pease.

Schaeffer's essay, "Transcendent Concepts: Power, Appraisal, and the Archivist as 'Social Context,'" was written for a course taught by Luciana Duranti. Schaeffer starts from the premise of that archives are important and chronicles the struggle by archivists to determine what the role of appraisal is and the implications of this function for service to society. He clearly places archival appraisal in the context of a social mandate and raises a variety of intriguing questions about what values should guide the archivist in appraising records.

Schaeffer's essay is an important review of appraisal theory and practice and demonstrates the important contributions that archival students can make to the literature of the profession. This essay will be published in an upcoming issue of the American Archivist.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Award

Veronika Emlerova of the Ceska Archivni Spolecnost (Czech Archival Society), received the Oliver Wendell Holmes Award. Established in 1979, the award allows overseas archivists, already in the United States or Canada for training, to augment their visit by traveling to the SAA annual meeting. Her participation at the meeting in Montreal was also supported by the International Council on Archives and a generous contribution from the International Research and Exchanges Board.

Emlerova has studied at Charles University in Prague within the Department of Auxiliary Historical Sciences and Archival Studies, and she is now preparing a dissertation on the reports of visitations of the parish clergy of the Prague Archbishops.

Emlerova is recognized by her colleagues as a skilled and dedicated newcomer to the profession. She was selected to speak at the International Congress on Archives in early September at a session entitled, "Archival Education: Preparing the Profession to Meet the Needs of Society in the 21st Century."

Colonial Dames Scholarships

Mary C. Barnes of the Tennessee State Library and Archives and Mary Frances Heathwaite of Glenmont, New York, were recipients of the Colonial Dames Scholarship. The award, funded by the Colonial Dames of America, Chapter III, covers a portion of the tuition, travel, and housing expenses at the Modern Archives Institute in Washington, D.C. The award is given to archivists who have been in the field less than two years and who are working with holdings predating 1825. Barnes attended the institute last June and Heathwaite will participate in the institute in January.
The 56th annual meeting of the Society of American Archivists is history. Approximately 875 people participated in the conference from September 12-17 at the Le Centre Sheraton Hotel in Montreal.

"More than the usual annual meeting, this one allowed us as individuals and as an association to expand our vision and enrich our professional lives," said SAA Executive Director Anne Diffendal. "Hosting archivists from around the world and cooperating with Canadian colleagues provided opportunities to re-examine our particular assumptions and practices."

Montreal was also the location of other archival meetings. This presented a unique opportunity for participants to interact with international colleagues. The XIth International Congress on Archives (ICA) convened at the city's convention center the week preceding the SAA annual meeting.

The Association of Canadian Archivists (ACA) and the Association des Archivistes du Quebec (AAQ) held conferences at the same time as SAA, at sites within walking distance of the Sheraton. For one registration fee, attendees could participate in all three meetings.

"Archives: A Global View" was the general theme of the SAA meeting. The program featured speakers from 14 different countries. The comprehensive offering of 82 sessions addressed a great range of archival topics and treated a wide variety of concerns—theoretical and practical, national and international, visual and textual, historical and contemporary, government and private. (Thirty-nine of the 82 sessions are available on cassette tape. See pages 11-12 for details.)

Unique to the program were the five 2020 VISION sessions, formulated by the SAA Committee on Goals and Priorities, which presented perspectives on broad changes in society and their likely impact on the archival profession. Adding to the international flavor was a session on archives in the post-Soviet era, which featured speakers from Russia and Estonia, and had simultaneous translations in English and Russian.

In addition to sessions, the conference featured a variety of tours, special events, and committee, section, and roundtable meetings. In between conference activities, attendees explored Montreal's restaurants, museums, shopping district, historical sections, underground city, and other points of interest.

Activities were organized to facilitate interaction between the different archival associations. A joint professional session between SAA, ACA, and AAQ on September 13th focused on "archival cooperation." Speakers from all three professional associations addressed how cooperation can help archivists to benefit from the varieties in our cultural, linguistic, and professional perspectives. Simultaneous translations in French and English were provided.

One of the special events was a joint reception for SAA, ACA, and AAQ, which was held at the city's new indoor ice rink in the L'Amphitheatre Bell building. Complimentary skate rentals enticed many archivists and others to demonstrate their athletic abilities.

Nearly thirty per cent of the annual meeting attendees also registered for pre-conference workshops in Montreal. SAA presented nine workshops in two and a half days, including “Managing Electronic Records,” “Photographic Collections Management,” “Archives, Personal Papers, and Manuscripts,” “Managing Legal Documents and Case Files,” Using Laser Disk and Imaging Technology for Archival Preservation and Reference Programs,” “From Photos to User Fees: Managing Archival Reproduction Services,” “Archives: An Introduction,” and “Records Management for Archivists.”

The staff of the Society of American Archivists would like to thank all those who planned, participated in, worked at, and supported this conference. Your contributions are truly appreciated.

SAA at ICA

SAA Executive Director Anne Diffendal and Managing Editor Teresa Brinati attended the Xllth International Congress on Archives (ICA), September 7-11, in Montreal, the week preceding SAA’s Annual Meeting. The conference was held at the city’s convention center, Palais de Congres, on the edge of China Town.

The Congress drew 2,668 participants from around the world significantly more than its preliminary estimate of 1,500 attendees. The conference presented a unique opportunity for the Society to interact with an international segment of the archival community.

SAA had a complimentary booth outside of the exhibit hall, courtesy of the Organizing Committee of the Congress. The booth was stocked with sample publications, 1993 book catalogs, copies of the special international issue of the American Archivist, membership brochures, and assorted other handouts. More than 1,000 people representing six continents—North and South America, Europe, Africa, Asia, and Australia—visited the booth. Two hundred orders for SAA publications were received from archivists from 22 different countries, including Slovenia, Indonesia, Iran, and Nigeria. Many of those visiting the booth were interested in joining SAA. Seven individuals even submitted membership applications on the spot.

“All in all, it was a very successful week for the Society in terms of marketing and public relations,” reported Executive Director Anne Diffendal.

For extending an invitation to SAA to participate in the conference, the Society would like to thank Jean-Pierre Wallot of the National Archives of Canada and Claude Minotto of the National Archives of Quebec, President and Executive Director respectively of the ICA Organizing Committee. The Society also would like to thank all of those members who helped staff the booth throughout the week, including Marjorie Barritt, Karen Benedict, Diane Cipas, Jim Fogerty, Edie Hedlin, Donald Jackanizcz, Eva Mosely, and Anne VanCamp. And to all the other members who dropped by to chat, we enjoyed visiting with you!

New Bookkeeper/Office Manager

Carroll Dendler joined the SAA staff as bookkeeper and office manager in mid-October. She previously worked as an accounting supervisor for Lutheran Social Services of Illinois. Carroll has a bachelor’s degree in accounting/ management from DePaul University. The SAA office is delighted to have her aboard.

Carroll replaces Ana Joyce, who held the bookkeeper position for almost two years. Ana left in September to pursue an opportunity with a local real estate agency. SAA wishes Ana continued success.

New Publication Available from SAA

Managing Electronic Records by William Saffady (ARMA 1992) deals with the proliferation of electronic records and provides a comprehensive discussion of records management concepts and methodologies as they apply to records containing machine-readable information. Specific topics discussed include:

- inventory methodology for electronic-based records;
- admissibility-in-evidence procedures for computer-generated records;
- media stability and system dependence issues;
- identification of vital electronic records threats and vulnerabilities;
- a risk analysis formula that calculates probable annual dollar loss.

SAA is now distributing Managing Electronic Records. The price for SAA members is $29 and for nonmembers $35, plus shipping and handling. To order your copy, contact the SAA Publications Department at (312) 922-0140. Prepayment required. Visa or Mastercard accepted.

Intergovernmental Records Project Report Distributed by NARA

The Intergovernmental Records Project Report by Marie B. Allen and Michael L. Miller (listed on page 17 of the 1993 SAA Publications Catalog) is no longer being distributed by SAA. The National Archives will be the sole distributor. To obtain a copy of the report, fax your name and address to Marie B. Allen at (202)501-7452.

American Archivist

The Fall 1991 issue (54:4) of the American Archivist was mailed to members and subscribers in late October. The Winter 1992 issue (55:1) was mailed in early November. The Spring 1992 issue is in production and slated for printing in December.

Clarification

In the September 1992 issue of the SAA Newsletter, the article “History Saved,” about the Los Angeles Uprising and the Southern California Library which escaped damage, included a photo of a mural. This mural was commissioned in 1990 by the Social Public Art Resource Center in the “Great Walls Unlimited: Neighborhood Pride Program” under contract with the City of Los Angeles, Cultural Affairs Department. The artist is Mike Alewitz.

Colonial Dames Scholarship

A scholarship to the National Archives’ Modern Archives Institute, to be held January 25 - February 5, 1993, is available from the Society of American Archivists. The award, funded by the Colonial Dames of America, Chapter III, covers a portion of the tuition, travel, and housing expenses at the Institute. To be eligible, an applicant must be an employee of an archival institution or agency with a fair percentage of its holdings in a period predating 1825; have been employed less than two years as an archivist or archives trainee; and actually be working with archives or manuscripts regardless of title.

Resumes accompanied by two letters of recommendation from persons having definite knowledge of the applicant’s qualifications should be submitted to Frank C. Mevers, New Hampshire State Archives, 71 S. Fruit Street, Concord, New Hampshire 03301, by December 1, 1992. If you have any questions, contact Frank Mevers at (603) 271-2236.
The Academy at Three

by Maygene Daniels
Immediate Past ACA President

At its 1992 annual business meeting in Montreal, the Academy of Certified Archivists celebrated its third birthday. Given the organization’s scope and ambitions, we often forget that the ACA is still a very young organization, and that each year it has developed in directions new to the archival profession.

When the Academy was organized at the SAA’s annual meeting in St. Louis, three years ago, it had a new certification examination, developed by the Interim Board on Certification, and a wave of applications for membership by petition. The examination was as of yet untested (the first exam was offered to 21 applicants at the St. Louis meeting) and the organization’s members knew little of the ACA’s future or even its organizational character. The task of processing petitions for certification was far from complete, and pressing issues relating to new examination procedures remained to be resolved. The organization had no constitution or by-laws, no tax status, no history, and no stationary.

Since then, the Academy has been organized and incorporated, its secretariat established, and its publicity and outreach programs formulated. It has established committees and task forces to examine its most pressing issues, including outreach and program development, financial management, and ethics. An examination committee charged with oversight of the certification examination has worked intensively to ensure the examination’s continued quality and relevance. The Academy has developed a strong flexible relationship with the Professional Examination Service, and has implemented an ambitious examination publicity and information program.

This year with the development of a proposed program and time table for recertification, the Academy has passed another important milestone. After review and discussion has been completed, a certification maintenance program that will help ensure the organization’s vitality, will be finalized and implemented.

In three years, the ACA has become a structured, manageable organization. Perhaps most important, the Academy’s organizational character and goals have been increasingly clear. Dedicated to a single purpose, certification of archivists, the Academy’s activities are dictated by the examination cycle and the imperative requirement that certification be a significant measure of practice-based archival knowledge.

With its goals clearly defined, the ACA has begun to have a broad impact on the archival profession. By identifying the elements of knowledge and skills needed for archival practice, the ACA offers individuals the opportunity to demonstrate their competence in an objective forum, and to measure and improve their knowledge and skills against current archival practice. It helps employers identify qualified individuals for archival positions and rewards practice-related skills and knowledge with appropriate opportunities. It has led to promotions and increased prominence for many certified archivists and has improved the standing of archival programs by underscoring the professional basis of archival practice.

In the future, certification also may begin to have broader, long-term impact in increased job status for archivists, enhanced public understanding of archival principles and practice, and improved professional standing. It may provide a catalyst for more educational offerings for beginning archivists and archivists in mid-career, and may encourage increased institutional support and recognition for professional accomplishment.

The ACA is still a very new organization whose impact is only beginning to be felt. Its influence will grow steadily in the next decade, as the momentum of the program continues to build.

The Examination Committee met in Chicago May 16-17, 1992 (the week after the ACA Board meeting). All the items (questions) in the item bank were reviewed and revised as necessary. Thereafter, a new exam was prepared for 1992.

Exam sites for 1993 are New Orleans, Louisiana; Boston, Massachusetts; San Francisco, California; and Chicago, Illinois. Exam sites for 1994 are Indianapolis, Indiana; New York, New York; Atlanta, Georgia; Seattle, Washington.

Report of the Secretary - Karen L. Jefferson

The ACA Newsletter will be published three times a year rather than six times to help reduce expenditures. Press releases and special mailings will be sent out to keep members and archivists aware of ACA activities.

A new membership directory will be prepared. Survey forms to update the directory listings will be mailed in 1993.

The ACA brochure will be updated after a program for certification maintenance is adopted.

Report of the Treasurer - Ron Watt

Summary of 1991-92 Finances:

Expenditures $37,249.42

ACA Archives Task Force Report - Wilda Logan Willis

A task force to explore the establishment of an archives for ACA records was approved at the May 1992 ACA Board meeting. The Task Force members are Wilda Logan Willis - chairperson, Patrick Quinn, and Frank Cook. Ms. Willis submitted a written report for the Board to consider. The report included a preliminary survey of the current records of the ACA. It was recommended that the ACA deposit its archives at the University of Wisconsin. The SAA records are deposited there, and include the early records documenting the development of the ACA. The Board will consider the recommendations at the next Board meeting.

Outreach Committee

The Outreach Committee was established as a standing committee at the May 1992 Board meeting. The Committee is an outgrowth of the Outreach and Development Task Force. Kaye Lanning Minchew is the chairperson, and has been instructed to draft a charge for the committee recommending a structure, and prioritizing the projects to be implemented. The first activity of the Committee Chairperson was to purchase, "CA" stickers. The stickers were distributed at the Montreal meeting and placed on name badges to highlight membership in ACA. They are available to members by calling the ACA Secretariat.

New Business

Three new task forces were established: Discipline Task Force; Constitution and By-laws Task Force; and Task Force on Examination Qualification.

- The Discipline Task Force was established as a follow up to the work of the Task Force on Ethics. The Discipline Task Force is to review the issues raised by the Task Force on Ethics. Issues of particular concern are to identify circumstances in which it would be appropriate to withdraw certification; the procedures by which cases that might require disciplinary action should be brought to the attention of the Academy; and procedures for considering such matters. Recommendations should also be made on how to publicize such policies and procedures to the membership. The ACA President will appoint the three members of the task force.

- The Constitution and By-laws Task Force was established to review the current document for revision as necessary. Under the current structure, the Board of Regents are underutilized while the Officers are overburdened. The Task Force will make recommendations to more evenly distribute the responsibilities among the Board members. Also, under the current structure, the President and Vice-President leave office at the same time, as do the Secretary and Treasurer. This results in a loss of continuity in the administration of the Board. The Task Force will consider recommendations to stratify the terms of office. The five member task force will be comprised of two former ACA officers or Board members, one current officer or board member, and two other ACA members. The ACA President will appoint the task force members. Mary Jo Pugh has been appointed to serve as the current Board member.

- The Task Force on Examination Qualification will study and make recommendations about the proposal submitted to the Board at its May meeting. The proposal recommended the explicit linking of graduate archival education and certification. It recommends that candidates with a master's degree that includes at least nine hours of archival education and a practicum of 140 hours be allowed to sit for the examination. Upon successful completion of the exam the candidate would become eligible for certification after presenting evidence of a minimum of one year qualifying professional archival experience. The proposal also recommends that eligibility based on the bachelor's degree be eliminated after three years. The ACA President will appoint the three-member task force.
Highlights of 1992 Business / Breakfast Meeting

The ACA held its annual business/breakfast meeting September 15, 1992, in the scenic Point Le Vue room in Le Centre Sheraton, Montreal, Canada. One hundred and twenty archivists and their guests attended the early morning session that was held from 7:00 a.m. until 8:15a.m. Incoming, outgoing, and continuing Board members were introduced. Reports on ACA activities were given by the Board Officers, and the work of the task forces was acknowledged. Blue and white “CA” stickers were distributed to the membership to place on their name tags. The names of the forty-six new members who successfully passed the 1991 exam were read. Those present at the meeting were asked to stand and be acknowledged. Certificates of appreciation for dedicated service and outstanding leadership were given to outgoing Board members: Maygene Daniels, President; Deborah Skaggs, Vice President; Patrick Quinn and Linda Evans, Board of Regents. The meeting closed with remarks from the newly-elected ACA President Bert Rhoads.

Forum Held On Certification Maintenance

The proposal for certification maintenance was mailed to all certified archivists in August. The ACA sponsored a forum on the proposal on September 16th, from 7:00pm - 9:00pm at the SAA conference in Montreal, Canada. The forum was chaired by David B. Gracy II, and some ACA Board members and members of the Task Force on Recertification were available to respond to the questions. Although the attendance was light, the discussion was lively. Those in attendance generally supported the proposal but questions and concerns were raised about the credit based application. Most concerns questioned the areas in which points would be given and/or the number of points given for a specific activity; and how the program would be implemented and when. The Board continues to welcome comments about the proposal. Letters may be sent to the Board through the ACA Secretariat address. And copies of the proposal on certification maintenance can be obtained by calling (312) 922-0140.

Some Thoughts on Certification Maintenance

The following responses are excerpts from some of the letters sent to the ACA Board about the proposal on certification maintenance. The excerpts are to provide an indication of the sentiments of some archivists and do not reflect the full comments of those who wrote letters.

- ...Given that a minimum of 100 points or credits is to be earned for recertification in a five year period, the present proposed structure for recertification seems capable of being met by virtually any working archivist “sleepwalking” through this period. In other words, there is little incentive (or pressure?) on anyone to keep up with a “mastery of a body of knowledge and skills” or to “stay abreast” of “new theoretical ideas, new technologies, improved methodologies, and changes in law and public policy.” My general impression is that ACA has reached down to create a program for the lowest common denominator rather than to take a stronger stand on professional competencies, standards and knowledge.

- ...Congratulations to those who obviously spent much time preparing the guidelines. They are comprehensive and offer numerous options for maintaining certification.... I wish to add my voice to those who suggest either increasing the credits to 125 or 150 if area 1 (employment) is included, or remain at 100 if employment is dropped, or limited to 20 or 25 credits. I am reminded of the wise, successful business owner who observed that some people have ten years of experience, others one year of experience ten times. Continued employment does not always equate continued professional growth. The credit requirements must be sufficiently demanding for other information professions to recognize our commitment to and demand for continuing professional growth.

- ...To be brief, the whole certification maintenance program should be scrapped. The only method to recertify any certified archivist (from the ACA secretariat, regents, and committee members on down) should be to pass the examination.

- ...The Board and ACA Committees are to be commended for their often thankless effort in ensuring the success of the Academy and in seeing it through its infancy.... Overall, the proposal appears to be solid and very comprehensive in its coverage of relevant points. However, there are some specific areas of concern.... For example, part-time employees may not be offered as many chances for continuing education, publication or professional activities etc. (possibly due to monetary reasons or seniority) and may find it impossible to accumulate the required 100 points...

- ...I am philosophically opposed to the tendency “that the Academy encourages certified archivists to sit for the examination instead of applying for the credit-based option.” If there must be recertification, then the tendency should be exactly the opposite; that is, certification maintenance should be fostered. Being “tested” is totally inappropriate for practicing, seasoned professionals with advanced degrees...

Obituary

Brenda McCallum, 43, head librarian of the Popular Culture Library at Bowling Green State University, died on August 25, 1992. Prior to her appointment as Assistant Professor/Head Librarian of the Popular Culture Library in July 1986, Ms. McCallum was director/archivist of the Archive of American Minority Cultures at the University of Alabama. She was instrumental in expanding the collection and attracting national and international researchers to the Popular Culture Library at BGSU. She was active in library and university activities and was a member of many professional organizations including the Society of American Archivists, the American Folklore Society, Popular Cultural Association, Midwest Archives Conference, and American Library Association. She graduated Summa Cum Laude with a B.A. in American Studies and English Literature from Rutgers University in 1975 and received her M.A. in 1979 from the State University of New York (Oneonta) in American Folk Culture. Ms. McCallum is survived by her parents, sister, spouse, and son.
At the height of the Second World War, General Dwight D. Eisenhower wrote: "The waging of war is accompanied by manifestations of the most ennobling of human virtue—courage, steadfastness, selflessness, devotion to duty, love of comrade, generosity, and sacrifice—instances of these become of such common occurrence that only the most dramatic are recorded. It is right that these should stand forever an inspiration to posterity..."

Part of the National Archives effort to commemorate the 50th anniversary of U.S. participation in World War II is an exhibition entitled "Personal Accounts: Pearl Harbor to V-J Day," Curated by Gary Yarrington of the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, the exhibition includes diaries, letters, photographs, recordings, artifacts, and other objects—all rich in information and insights—that reflect the kaleidoscope of experiences and emotions the war thrust upon participants, from commanding general to ordinary soldier.

The materials in "Personal Accounts" convey vividly the ennobling virtues that General Eisenhower referred to. Sometimes dramatic but often not, they did get recorded for posterity, and they do inspire us today. Some of them come from the holdings of the National Archives; many others are on loan. In the sweep of their subject matter, the materials in this exhibition reflect many different aspects of the war. They set personal experiences against the backdrop of global warfare. They also provide occasional glimpses of how the forces we opposed viewed the conflict.

The contents of this exhibition thus are at once intensely personal and universal. They communicate across time, and across all other barriers, the human meaning of human conflict. The unique and powerful personal accounts in this exhibition remind us of the hardships and the excitement of military service, of the great moments and the supremely individual ones that made up this country’s wartime history. Thanks to our system of presidential libraries, and to generous assistance from the private sector, the National Archives is able to display "Personal Accounts" in ten locations from California to Massachusetts before it comes to Washington, D.C., in 1995. Many thousands of people are seeing for themselves just what World War II meant to other people fifty years ago. Each of us who views the exhibition will be affected in our own particular ways, just as those who recorded these personal accounts were affected differently by the war, but each of us will be touched somehow.

This exhibition, like all the activities that the National Archives has initiated or joined in sponsoring during this commemoration, seeks to glorify neither World War II nor the combat that was its deadly reality. Instead, these activities honor those who served, and especially those who sacrificed, so that democracy and liberty might be preserved at their darkest hour. This 50th anniversary may well be the last time that we can thank them personally for their efforts during that pivotal period half a century ago.

"Personal Accounts," along with those other activities I referred to, reminds those whose memories of the Second World War are blurred and distant but also educates those who are too young to have personally experienced this period of high drama in our national existence. Veterans are able to put their own experiences into a global context, and those who did not experience the Second World War firsthand can grasp what it meant to those who did.

This is why the National Archives, or any other archival repository, organizes an exhibition like "Personal Accounts": to communicate, through the uniquely authentic voices of original documents, the experience of other people in other times—to bring people and documents into intimate contact so that all of us can discover for ourselves and reflect upon what they can tell us. Those who created the personal accounts in our exhibition had, as Yarrington puts it, "a ringside seat to history"; we who visit the exhibition are able to look over their shoulders and experience it with them.

Exhibitions like "Personal Accounts" are not intended merely to entertain, though we hope they do attract and sustain interest. Nor are they isolated phenomena, for they support and strengthen other archival functions. Primarily, an exhibition demonstrates what an archival repository collects, preserves, and makes available to users. Public awareness and understanding are essential for adequate support and resources. Those who visit an archives to see an exhibition like "Personal Accounts" come away knowing more about the institution; an archives may become a part of their overall cultural vocabulary. An exhibition also encourages viewers to explore and appreciate their individual and collective histories. It often contributes to scholarship, too, either by bringing new information to light or by presenting known information in a fresh manner. As a result, both the topic of the exhibition and the nature of archival work become better understood by wider audiences.

In addition, exhibitions encourage closer ties among repositories, which must borrow from each other in order to augment their resources. They encourage, too, closer ties with individuals and groups who can lend documents and other items to round out those the repository itself can furnish. And exhibitions are beneficial to an archives in other ways. Putting one together compels it to analyze its holdings more critically, in order to select what merits display, and to exercise its imagination, in order to communicate with the intended audiences. When an archives knows its holdings better, and its potential audiences better, it can serve all its users better. Exhibitions are, therefore, worth every bit of the time and energy they take to organize and mount.

The human meaning of World War II was brought home to me by a pencilled note on a newspaper in "Personal Accounts." On the front page announcing the Japanese surrender, someone had scrawled: "Mother's birthday." This tells me that people want to link larger events to their own lives. This was true of those who fought in the war and of those who contributed on the homefront. It is also true of those who come to see the exhibition for themselves. The goal of the National Archives is to enable our users to establish those personal links with our shared past. An exhibition like "Personal Accounts" helps to do that, and I hope you will be able to see it.
FY93 Appropriations

Eager to adjourn, Congress passed thirteen appropriations bills during the first week of October. The Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government appropriations bill, signed by the President, includes $165 million for the National Archives, with $5 million earmarked for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission (NHPRC). The National Archives, which received $152 million this year, will have a $13 million increase for FY93. There is no additional operational money because almost all of the increase will go toward preparations for the move to Archives II, a new research facility that will open in 1994. The $5 million appropriation for NHPRC represents a seven percent decrease from the FY92 funding level.

Access to JFK Assassination Material

Congress recently passed a bill which would make available to the public most of the government's secret files relating to the 1963 assassination of President Kennedy. Although the bill states that agencies have two years to identify, organize, and review pertinent records, there is a provision for a one-year extension. It will probably be three years before all of the estimated one and a half million Congressional, agency, and Presidential pages are available in the National Archives for researcher's use. The Senate bill specified that in establishing the Kennedy Assassination Records Collection "the archivist shall endure the physical integrity and original provenance of all records." The final version of the bill did not include a publication by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission of selected materials, a provision of the House bill. The JFK legislation requires a showing of clear and convincing evidence of postponing the opening of any material and asserts the need to balance the public's need to know with national security concerns.

Law Passed to Clarify Fair Use of Unpublished Copyright Material

Just prior to adjourning, the Senate passed H.R. 4412, a bill to clarify the "fair use" of unpublished copyrighted material, which had been passed by the House in August. The Senate had passed a similar bill almost a year ago; but in the interest of getting something passed before the end of the 102nd Congress, the Senate agreed to the House version. H.R. 4412 states: "Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that section 107 of title 17, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: 'The fact that a work is unpublished shall not itself bar a finding of fair use if such finding is made upon consideration of all factors set forth in paragraphs (1) through (4).'

Paragraphs 1 through 4 provide four statutory factors that the courts are instructed to consider in making "fair use" judgements. These are: purpose and character of use; nature of copyrighted material (whether published or unpublished); the amount and substantiality of the portion used; and effect of the use on the market value of copyrighted work. House Report 102-836 which accompanied H.R. 4412 however, concerned scholars for it seemed to approve only very limited use of copyrighted unpublished material.

Although the House and Senate bills contain similar language, the way the sponsors of these bills interpret them has been quite different. Representative William Hughes (D-NJ) advocates a narrow interpretation and Senator Paul Simon (D-IL) a broad view. Since the House Report seemed to endorse a narrow view of fair use, Senators Simon, Patrick Leahy (D-VT), Edward Kennedy (D-MA), Charles Grassley (R-IA), Howard Metzenbaum (D-OH), and Herbert Kohl (D-WI) made a joint floor statement at the time the Senate passed H.R. 4412 to emphasize their legislative intent. They asserted that "the effect of Salinger and New Era decisions has been profound, resulting in chilling uncertainty and serious apprehension in the publishing community regarding fair use of unpublished material."

Their statement observed that these two cases had threatened to establish a virtual per se rule against fair use of any unpublished materials, such as letters and diaries." These Senators concluded that "it is no exaggeration to say that if the trend were to continue, it could severely damage the ability of journalists and scholars to use unpublished primary materials. This would be a crippling blow to accurate scholarship and reporting."

The floor statement made clear that the purpose of H.R. 4412 is to "undo the harm caused by the overly restrictive standards adopted in Salinger and New Era, and to clearly and indisputably reject the view that the unpublished nature of the work triggers a virtual per se ruling against a finding of fair use." The senators specifically noted that H.R. 4412 was necessary to address the limitations of the recent Wright v. Warner Books which "did not explicitly disavow the narrow formulation of the fair use doctrine espoused in Salinger and New Era."

With passage of this legislation, the courts will be instructed to make a carefully reasoned and complete consideration of each of the fair use factors set forth in Section 107 of the Copyright Act.
Continuing Education Courses

At this writing, the following courses have been scheduled for winter and spring 1993:

Understanding the USMARC Format for Archival and Manuscripts Control
February 11-12, 1993
The Historic New Orleans Collection
New Orleans, Louisiana

Instructors: Marion Matters, Consultant, and Debbie Pendleton, Alabama Department of Archives and History
This is the third USMARC format workshop scheduled in the 1992-93 season. We do not anticipate holding any others prior to the 1993 Annual Meeting in New Orleans next September.

Designed to provide participants with an understanding of the structure of the USMARC format for archival and manuscripts control, this course will provide particular training in the use of USMARC format fields. Participants learn through lecture and informal exercises showing USMARC tagging of typical archival descriptions and supporting material.

From Photos to User Fees: Managing Photographic Reproduction Services
February 27, 1993
Arizona State University
Tempe, Arizona
Instructor: Susan Seyl of the Oregon Historical Society.
Co-sponsored by the Coordinating Committee for History in Arizona and the Department of Public History of Arizona State University
This course is designed for archives and museum managers, who want to plan, manage, price, and market effectively reproductions of all types of archival holdings. Several subjects will be covered, including planning for a photo-reproduction service; establishing policies to cover pricing and uses for reproductions; identifying a competent photo lab; and developing a marketing plan.

Donor Relations
March 31, 1993
St. Augustine, Florida
(in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Society of Florida Archivists)
April 30, 1993
John F. Kennedy Presidential Library
Boston, Massachusetts
(in conjunction with the spring meeting of the New England Archivists)
INSTRUCTOR FOR BOTH WORKSHOPS:
David J. Murrah of Texas Tech University
Archivists and museum managers who depend on donations to develop their collections should attend this workshop.
Topics include:
• developing a collecting strategy
• legal considerations (deeds of gift, donor; strategy for solicitation; negotiation);
• the ethics of collecting;
• the costs of acquisition, preservation, and reference; and
• when and how to say "No" to unsolicited material.

Architectural Records: Identification, Preservation, and Access
April 15, 1993
Atlanta, Georgia
(in conjunction with the spring meeting of the Society of Georgia Archivists)
INSTRUCTOR: Waverly B. Lowell of the National Archives/Pacific Sierra Region
Everyone has architectural records in their repositories, but few archivists have the knowledge to care for the records in a manner that will provide adequate preservation and access. This workshop will help archivists meet the challenges that these materials pose for those trained to work with textual records.
An overview will be presented of the different types of architectural records that exist and how to identify them, as well as appraise, arrange and describe, use, and practical ways to preserve the records. In addition, the archivist will learn to be an activist in collecting and preserving documentation of the built and planned environment.

Advanced Appraisal
April 28-29
San Jose, California
(in conjunction with the spring meeting of the Society of California Archivists)
INSTRUCTOR: Frank Boles of Central Michigan University
This course is designed for archivists who want to go beyond fundamental theory to examine factors that affect appraisal. Participants will examine the relevance of several different considerations that affect appraisal decisions, such as value of information (including such elements as content analysis, potential use, and the relationship to other documentation); the costs of acquisition, preservation, and reference; and implications of the selection decision relative to internal policies and external relations.

Archives, Personal Papers, and Manuscripts
May 12-13, 1993
Bismarck Hotel
Chicago, Illinois
(in conjunction with the Midwest Archivists Conference spring meeting)
This course is designed for archivists and librarians, who are responsible for the cataloging of archives and manuscripts. Using the publication Archives, Personal Papers, and Manuscripts as a basis for instruction, the following topics will be covered:
• archival cataloging in general;
• bibliographic components and record types;
• determining sources of information;
• choice of headings and other access points;
• archival titles and dates;
• physical description and statements of extent;
• archival cataloging notes in general; and
• USMARC format considerations.
Update on Guidelines for a Master’s Degree in Archival Studies

Frank Boles, chair of the Committee on Education and Professional Development (CEPD), reports that CEPD met during the Society’s annual meeting in Montreal and discussed at length the latest draft of guidelines for a master’s degree in archival studies. CEPD is in conceptual agreement over the need for such guidelines and also found common ground in the overall content and basic themes outlined in the draft document. Discussion did occur over the organization of some portions of the draft. In particular, the Committee chose to redraft the curriculum section to reflect a clearer conceptualization of what members believe should be the curricular elements of a master’s degree in archival studies. The committee also agreed to revise the introduction to create a more forceful justification for the guidelines. Boles appointed a subcommittee of three to redraft guidelines. CEPD will review the revised draft at the mid-winter meeting; if the Committee approves the work of the subcommittee, the Committee chair will forward the document to the Standards Board for distribution and review throughout the Society.

Using the Canadian guidelines as a model, CEPD began work in spring 1991 on the new SAA Guidelines for a Master's Degree in Archival Studies. The latest draft calls for a graduate program in archival studies that is autonomous in nature and has at least one full-time, tenure track faculty position, supplemented by adjunct faculty. The draft also outlines desired curriculum elements in core knowledge areas (i.e. archival history, theory, methods, records management); shared knowledge areas (i.e. management, information and library science, history); and infrastructural requirements for the degree program.

Archival Information Processing for Sound Recordings

by David H. Thomas

Catalog Librarian and Sound Archivist
Rodgers & Hammerstein Archives of Recorded Sound
New York Public Library

... a theoretical and practical discussion of the creation of the database for the noncommercial sound recordings in the Rodgers & Hammerstein Archives ... going beyond either standard archival practice, which provided limited points of access leading to a register, or standard library cataloging, which provides multiple points of access but is too time consuming for an archival situation.

This "database has helped turn chaos into order, 'stuff in the box' into processed collections, curator's memory into printed finding aids, miscellaneous retaping into systematic preservation routines, and labor-intensive scanning of archival registers into quick and easy computer searching" —Christine Hoffman (Assistant Chief of the Rogers & Hammerstein Archives).

... an important addition to the knowledge of every archivist, librarian, and private collector who has any interest or involvement with sound recordings.

Cost: $33.00 ($27.00 to MLA members).

Preservation

by Evelyn Frangakis and Danielle Feuillan

A number of significant Archival Preservation Management Program activities have occurred since the last newsletter issue. The Program faculty convened in Chicago between August 30 and September 1 to further develop and fine tune the curriculum and to receive training in teaching methods and techniques. Dr. Jack Prosko, Associate Director of the Center for Teaching and Learning at Stanford University, acted as an excellent meeting facilitator and faculty trainer. It was a very productive and informative meeting.

To date the following instructors have been selected for the special media component of the Program:

- Gary Albright, NEDCC (photographic materials, series I)
- Fynette Eaton, National Archives (electronic media, series I)
- Alan Lewis, National Archives (audiovisual materials, series I)
- Charles Dollar, National Archives (electronic media, series II)

The Preservation Program staff conducted a site visit for the Midwestern workshop series and confirmed that the Campbell Center for Historic Preservation in Mount Carroll, Illinois, will be the host site for workshops B and C of that series, Chicago being the host site for workshop A.

We would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge the varied and general work of the Preservation Program's Advisory Committee. They have been extremely helpful in the areas of recruitment, publicity, and overall availability. Some members will even be teaching in the Program itself. They are as follows:

- Brenda Banks, Georgia State Archives
- Nicholas Burckel, Washington University, St. Louis Missouri
- Judith Fortson, Hoover Institution, Stanford University
- David Gracy II, University of Texas, School of Library Science
- Howard Lowell, Delaware State Archives
- Trudy Peterson, National Archives
- Bob Sink, New York Public Library

At this printing the Northeastern Series has kicked off the Program with workshop A in progress in New Brunswick, New Jersey. Evelyn Frangakis and Diana Alper are teaching a full series composed of fifteen participants. We are pleased to report that a full range of archival repositories is represented within this group.

Please note that the following deadlines remain for the Archival Preservation Management Program:

- Application Deadline for the Western Series: July 1, 1993
- Application Deadline for the Southeastern Series: October 1, 1993

NHRPC Grant Funds Cut for FY93

The budget for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission has been cut seven percent for the coming 1993 fiscal year.

The NHRPC provides grants to nonprofit organizations nationwide to preserve historical records and make them accessible. Grant recipients include archives, historical societies, museums, universities and state and local governments.

NHRPC's appropriation for fiscal year 1992 was $5.4 million for grant funds. The Congress has passed a conference committee bill that reduces the appropriation to $5 million for fiscal year 1993. President Bush has signed the bill.

The conference committee met to reconcile conflicting bills for appropriations for the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government. NHRPC grant funds are a line item in the National Archives budget, which is in that bill. The House of Representatives had voted to cut NHRPC grants to $4 million, a 25% reduction, as requested in the President's budget proposals for FY 1993. The Senate had voted to raise NHRPC funds to $6 million, an 11% increase. The conference committee, and subsequently the Congress as a whole, split the difference.

Microfilming Project of Communist Party Archives Begins

The Committee for Archives of the Government of the Russian Federation (Roskomarkhiv) and the Hoover Institution have begun a joint project to microfilm records and inventories of the Communist Party of the former Soviet Union, as well as selected holdings of the State Archives. These materials are at three repositories: Center for Contemporary Documentation (formerly the Central Committee Archives), Russian Center for Preservation and Study of Contemporary Historical Documents (formerly the Central Party Archives of the Institute for Marxism/Leninism), and the State Archives of the Russian Federation (successor agency of the Archive of the October Revolution and the Historical Archive of the Russian Federation).

The project has three components: the development of an archival and scholarly exchange program to benefit Russian studies; the preservation of approximately 25 million sheets of archival documentation on 25,000 reels of microfilm; and the marketing and distribution of the microfilm. The project, expected to cost $3 million, will take five years to complete.

The Ethics of Disclosing Personal Information in Public Archives

Heather MacNeil

This book explores the theoretical and practical issues associated with the administration of access to government-held personal information. Its theme is the balance archivists must strike in negotiating access to such information: how do archivists reconcile research and privacy interests concerning the disclosure of personal information? In situations where the two interests conflict, where does an archivist's professional responsibility lie? Some of the topics discussed include the moral and legal principles underlying the right to privacy; the emergence of specific right to information privacy and its embodiment in Canadian and American law; legislative attempts to reconcile competing interests in access; and trends in sociohistoric research that have contributed to the growing demand for records containing personal information in government archives.

Heather MacNeil is a freelance archivist who has written and lectured on archival ethics and descriptive standards.
